Md. Oyster Patrol Boat Fires on Va. Raider

Latter Escapes Across Potomac Bar After Abandoning Dredge to Officers

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Colonial Beach, Va., Sept. 15.—A Maryland patrol boat machine-gunned an Old Dominion oyster raider's boat last night.

The patrol fired at least 11 rounds of 45-caliber ammunition at the Virginia craft. The shooting ushered in the 1948 Maryland-Virginia battle of the bivalves, a conflict dating back to a Colonial boundary dispute.

Inspector Guy Johnson, a member of the reinforced Maryland pason, returned to dock on the Marytrol fleet of Capt. Chester C. Culliland side of the Potomac today with this story:

He and his mate, James Saunders of the Maryland Tidewater Fisheries Commission, encountered a Virginia oysterman near Swann Point about 11:30 last night.

Virginia Craft Flees

As they pulled alongside the oyster boat, its crew threw a dredge overboard and took off in their high-powered craft. The police boat was unable to surmount the oyster bar with its 3-foot draught. The escaping craft had only a 1-foot draught.

Inspector Saunders opened up with a .45 submachine gun as the boat pulled away. Today he had the oyster boat's discarded dredge as evidence, along with 11 empty .45 shells in the bottom of Johnson's craft.

Virginia oystermen here early this morning acknowledged that one "work boat," was punctured with anywhere from 8 to 15 bullet holes.

Attempted to Seize Craft

Johnson said he was trying to take the boat in tow for illegal oyster dredging when shots were fired. In attempting this action, the bow of Johnson's boat struck the stern of the oyster boat. It was at this point that the oyster boat hopped the oyster bar and started to make its escape. Since Johnson could not pursue the craft, Saunders fired at its stern.

Saunders said he first tried to lasso the skipper of the three-man oyster boat with a line but failed. He said the oysterman was seen to take off his shoes, as if making ready to jump overboard, and was heard to say:

"Go ahead and kill me. I don't care."

The Maryland patrollers said it would have been a simple matter to do so, actually, since the oyster boat was within "spitting distance."

When they saw the dredge had been cut loose and it appeared the workboat might escape, Johnson said Saunders aimed away from the oyster crew and fired in hopes of taking them in tow.

Captain Johnson said, "We really don't expect much trouble from these people this season."

Maryland authorities served notice yesterday that they would be more vigilant than ever in hopes

Fire Devouring 1000 Acres of Forest Hourly

Ojai, Calif., Sept. 15 (U.P.).—Fire crews watched helplessly today while fire along a 50-mile front raced mile-by-mile through Los Padres National Forest.

The flames, advancing from hill to hill, ate through 10,000 acres during the night and 30,000 acres lay in ashes.

More than 1000 acres an hour were going up in flames.

One man was dead, 200 injured, and a three-state alert was posted for fire-line reinforcements. A force of 1500 was trying to check the spread of the fire.

In the fourth day of the blaze, the fire was rolling into Rose Valley and the Piedra Blanca country.

Friday: Gallup Election Preview In New Jersey

New Jersey comes under the Gallup Poll's microscope next in the current series of presidential previews.

"If the election were held today, how would you vote—for Truman, Dewey or Wallace?" New Jerseyites were asked. In the last two elections they went Democratic. See how they would cast their ballots now, as revealed Friday in the Gallup Poll, exclusively in The Post.

Masked Firemen Fight 'Mystery' Fire

By Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

PREVENTIVE ACTION—Burning coal is removed from the basement of the Herndon School in Fairfax County by Volunteer Firemen Lee Poole (left) and James Brenner, both of Herndon. They wear masks against smoke and coal gas. Although no trace of explosive gases was found, safety engineers could not be certain that no blast would occur, so 485 students were ordered out of the school building yesterday while coal was carried out.

Truman Abets Law Defiance, Taft Retorts

ITU Case Letter Called Effort to Win Favor of Labor Bosses

Cincinnati, Sept. 15 (AP).—Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) said today President Truman "has encouraged the open defiance of the law now engaged in by some of the more radical labor bosses."

He called Mr. Truman's attack on him yesterday "merely an attempt to curry favor with the labor bosses who control the labor publicity to which he is looking for help in the election."

The President released a letter yesterday, addressed to David P. Findling, NLRB associate general counsel, accusing Taft of an "entirely improper" attempt to "put the heat" on the NLRB to act against the International Typographical Union, AFL.

Taft Issues Reply

"It seems to me that it is entirely improper for any Senator, no matter what his politics or his rank in the Senate may be, to attempt to put the heat on one of the executive departments," the President wrote.

The text of Taft's reply follows:

"President Truman's charge, reported after a month's delay, that I was improperly 'putting the heat' on the National Labor Relations Board at a meeting on July 28, only shows that we have reached the silly season in politics. It is not only the practice, but the duty, of every Congressman and Senator when his constituents allege that some executive department is not doing its duty in relationship to matters in which they are interested, to take up that matter with the executive department concerned.

Charges Politics

"If the constituents appear to have a prima facie case, every Senator and Congressman urges prompt action, or some reason for failure to act. I suppose President Truman must have done this a thousand times when he was Senator: His War Investigating Committee frequently urged action by district attorneys where they felt the facts justified the submission of any case to the courts.

"As a matter of fact, the Truman statement is merely an attempt to curry favor with the labor bosses who control the labor publicity to

Mystery Fire In Coal Pile Closes School

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

A mysterious fire that apparently broke out Monday in a 100-ton coal pile yesterday forced the closing of Herndon School in Fairfax County.

The 485 elementary and high school students took an unexpected holiday while a crew of volunteer firemen and school employes worked in gas masks to remove the smoking coal from a basement storage bin.

Harold L. Leonard, safety engineer for the Washington Gas Light Co., told school officials he could find no trace of explosive gases. But he added that he couldn't be sure no explosion would result.

In one part of the bin where gases were concentrated, Leonard said he detected four-tenths of 1 per cent of carbon monoxide. Eight minutes' exposure to 2 per cent would kill a person, he said.

First evidence that something was wrong, according to Assistant Superintendent of Schools J. H. Rice, came Monday when teachers reported an odor of gas in the building housing the heating plant.

This building is about 300 feet from the main school building. Besides the heating plant, it houses the gymnasium and two classrooms, Rice said.

Investigation led to the bin, Rice said, where coal delivered in the past two months was piled about 8 feet high. Students in rooms over the bin were transferred to the main building Tuesday, while workmen tore down the sides of the bin.

Yesterday the school closed down entirely while the coal was being removed. Rice said students should report to school today, though they

Fishing Schooner Believed Sunk In Hurricane

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—A three-masted Portuguese fishing schooner, caught in the path of the hurricane that hit Bermula on Monday, presumably has sunk, the Coast Guard reported today.

An SOS from the stricken vessel, the auxiliary schooner Gaspar, was picked up at 1:03 p. m. (EDT) and no further signals have been heard, the Coast Guard said.

The 309-ton vessel last reported its position as 900 miles east of Halifax, Nova Scotia, about 400 miles from the center of the hurricane.

Five ships were en route to the scene to aid in possible rescues.

U. S. Asks Court to Break Up 4 Largest Meat Packing Firms

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Attorney General Tom C. Clark yesterday turned the guns of the Department of Justice on the meat packing industry.

In one of the biggest antitrust suits in years the Justice Department asked the Federal Court in Chicago to break up the Nation's four largest meat packing companies into 14 "separate and competing companies."

Clark's petition charged that Swift & Co., Armour & Co., the Cudahy Packing Co., and Wilson & Co., Inc., had conspired to monopolize the interstate trade in purchasing and slaughtering cattle. The result of such activities, the petition chrges, has been higher prices for meats.

The Justice Department announced, in a departmental handout coincident with the filing in Chicago, that the suit seeks to divide Swift and Armour each into five separate companies, and Cudahy and Wilson into two each.

The action, Clark said, is "another in a series of cases instituted by the Department of Justice in furtherance of the program to free the production and sale of food and food products from monopolistic restraint."

The filing of the petition

Union Official Defies Probers On Red Query

Burt Scorns Question: 'Are You a Communist?' Risks Contempt Charge

By the United Press

An officer of the CIO International Fur and Leather Workers Union risked prosecution for contempt of Congress yesterday by refusing to tell a House Labor Subcommittee whether he is a Communist.

Sam Burt, a vice president of the union, told the subcommittee he would not be "a true American" if he didn't stand on his constitutional rights and ignore the "Are you a Communist?" question.

Chairman Max Schwabe, (R., Mo.) who had announced earlier that contempt charges would be brought against any witness who balked at that question, ordered Burt to leave the stand, subject to recall.

He did not say whether he would try to have Burt cited for contempt.

Secretary Denies He's Red

The subcommittee had put the same query a few minutes earlier to Pietro Lucchi, secretary-treasurer of the union, who denied that he is or ever was a Red.

Burt and Lucchi were the first two union witnesses called to answer charges that their organization and the entire one-billion-dollar-a-year New York fur industry are dominated by Communists.

Ben Gold, president of the union, is scheduled to testify today.

The subcommittee had heard five days of testimony by management witnesses who swore that the furriers' union was a Red-controlled outfit whose members were forced to contribute to the Henry A. Wallace campaign. Communist newspapers and other causes dictated by their leaders.

Lucchi scoffed at the charges. He said the fur workers had benefited enormously under the present leadership and that the political contributions they made were voluntary.

Burt had begun reading a prepared statement along similar lines

Science Association Asks Ethiopian To Forgive Afront

'Foundation' Ready For Vital Research, Scientists Are Told

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

A Constitution Hall usher's request that the Ethiopian Minister leave his box seat at the opening meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science yesterday brought an apology from the organization.

The incident occurred Monday night just as President Truman entered the hall to welcome the scientists, and was first reported to the AAAS late Tuesday by a representative of the Yugoslav Embassy.

The Yugoslav diplomat said he saw an usher approach the Ethiopian Minister, Ras H. S. Imru, and speak to him, following which the diplomat left the hall.

The Yugoslav envoy questioned the usher. He was told that a woman instructed the usher to ask the minister to leave the box and take a seat elsewhere. The usher said he did not know the name of the woman.

An AAAS spokesman said the organization had "hired the hall and the ushers came with it."

The AAAS executive committee took the incident up Wednesday

The sun shone yesterday through former clouds of scientific pessimism and not only hope but abundance of sun-supplied food and power was forecast for civilization's future.

Source of this new era of plenty is solar energy, which scientists will someday convert to food and fuel almost as freely as the sun now shines, Dr. Farrington Daniels, chemist, told scientists assembled here.

Though the world is not yet ready, economically, for this step, Dr. Daniels said, science already has the "foundations" to carry out the research necessary to bring it about. He urged continued research.

He spoke at a symposium on "Sources of Energy" at the Departmental Auditorium, 13th st. and Constitution ave. nw., one of many sessions yesterday for delegates to the current centenary convention

Royall Says Troops May Load Ships

Action Promised If Army Cannot Hire Sufficient Civilians on Coast

By The Associated Press

Troops will be used to load military cargoes on the West Coast if the Army is unable to hire stevedores in the struck ports or get the work done by contract, Army Secretary Royall said yesterday.

For the past two weeks a strike of CIO longshoremen has tied up the movement of Army cargoes to Pacific bases.

Royall emphasized that the Army "must and will" move out its essential shipments. He said it is making a determined effort to recruit civilian employes to load the vessels, and trying to contract for the loading on a cost-plus-fixed-fee basis or otherwise.

However, he added in a statement:

"To the extent that the Army is unable to load its cargo by employment or by contract, troops will be used to do the loading."

Union Assails Plan

In San Francisco, the striking longshoremen's union issued a statement saying that if any labor union "stands idly by while the Army engages in strikebreaking . . . then the organized labor movement and collective bargaining are on their way to extinction as free institutions."

The union statement said the Army was engaged in "strikebreaking in behalf of a group of arrogant employers who bargain with the union only if they can select the union's officers." It did not amplify. West Coast ports have been strike-bound for two weeks.

CIO pickets reappeared before the Army hiring office in San Francisco today for the second day informing applicants they would be considered "scabs" and the ships they worked would be listed as "hot."

Recruiting of stevedores began at Seattle today with 500 union pickets milling around the Army employment office.

Pickets passed out pamphlets charging the Army was doing "a clever job of strikebreaking on behalf of the shipowners."

Union Halls disregarded

The Waterfront Employers' Association had no comment on Secretary Royall' statement.

Center of the union disagreement with the Army is the fact it is not seeking help through union hiring halls.

Bridges has declared he would request unions in all foreign ports to refuse to handle Army ships.

This cast an international implication into the crippling tie-up and made uncertain the unloading of Army food and supplies destined for Pacific areas.

Army action to hire men directly was taken yesterday after shipping employers refused to load or sail as long as they had to deal with what they called "Communist party-line leadership." Bridges has declined to sign a non-Communist affidavit under the Taft-Hartley Act.

Bridges personally led lines of his white-capped longshoremen forming virtually a shoulder-to-shoulder barricade in front of the Army employment office at the Fort Mason port of embarkation here.

Men seeking work—mostly non-unionists—were told they would be considered strikebreakers and would be fired by the Army as soon as the strike ends. But there was no violence. If they insisted on signing up, they were allowed to pass.

West Envoys Get No Answer From Molotov; U. S. Adding to Airlift

Quick Decisions Dangerous

Patience and Long Debate Vital in U. N., Says Marshall

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.
Post Reporter

Secretary Marshall interrupted his work on the Berlin crisis yesterday to make a speech appealing for patience, tolerance and understanding "in making the kind of world we want."

His apeal did not mention the deadlock over Berlin or the growing official and public exasperation over Soviet tactics. It was devoted entirely to the United Nations, and was delivered at a luncheon of the Federal Bar Association in fulfillment of an engagement made long ago.

He spoke a few days before going to Paris for the U. N. Assembly, which may have the Berlin crisis laid before it by the Western powers.

"You lawyers must help us to remind our people," said the Secretary, "that the United Nations is a place for negotiation among governments and that such negotiations require patience and long debate.

"In an inflamed political situation, a quick decision upon the merits might call for immediate enforcement, perhaps war. Protracted negotiations may be desirable as a poultice to draw some of the fever out of the problem in order to permit recovery

Can't See Stalin, Who's Out of Town, Three Are Told in Latest Conference

By Ned Russell

London, Sept. 15 (NYHT). Soviet Foreign Minister Vyacheslav M. Molotov today declined to give an immediate reply to any of the points raised by the western envoys in protest against the attitude of Marshal Vassily D. Sokolovsky, Soviet military governor in Germany, in his talks with the western military governors over various questions affecting the Russian land blockade of Berlin.

Molotov told the western ambassadors that it would not be possible for them to have an audience with Premier Josef Stalin. He said the Premier was out of town.

Confidental reports about the hour and a half meeting with Molotov at the Kremlin last night showed that the session had been inconclusive. This resulted in a new wave of pessimism which was tempered only by the disclosure by officials closely connected with the Berlin crisis that there would be another meeting with Molotov.

The Western envoys at Moscow are American Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith, French Ambassador Yves Chataigneau and special British representative Frank Roberts. They had asked to see Stalin in the hope of persuading him to instruct Marshal Sokolovsky to stay within the limits of the four-power directives which he had helped to draft two weeks ago for the Berlin meetings of the military governors. The Western representatives wanted to explain to him how Marshal Sokolovsky had exceeded the earlier agreement in principle by raising new demands.

Instead, they had to make their protest to Molotov. His refusal to make any immediate comment on the Western complaints caused some concern here, but it was pointed out that he explained he would have to "consult"—presumably with Stalin. There was no evidence of any harshness or ill-feeling at the meeting, according to authoritative sources.

Ship Agent Denies Vessel Was Fired On

U. S. Craft Circled By Planes Which Only Dropped Flares

Tokyo, (Thursday) Sept. 16 (AP). The agent for the Liberty ship Moses Brown said today the vessel radioed that two unidentified planes circled and dropped flares Saturday night, but that the ship was not fired upon.

The agent, Myles S. Waterman of C. F. Sharp Co., said the ship's skipper reported last night that the incident occurred about 30 miles east of Russia's Siberian port of Tetyukhe in the Sea of Japan.

Waterman explained he had contacted the Moses at the request of the operators, the Shepard Lines, because the skipper failed in a previous message to locate the incident other than "off the Siberian coast." He said the skipper at no time reported being fired upon, as was stated in a report circulated in the United States.

The vessel was en route to a port in Russian-occupied North Korea from the port of Toro on the Sakhalin Island. It was carrying a cargo of coal.

(In San Francisco, a spokesman for the Shepard Line denied emphatically that the oses Brown had been fired upon. F. C. Minnis, the company's West Coast manager, said the ship's report of the flares was routine.

(Minnis expressed belief that either the United States or Russian planes dropped the flares for identification purposes only.

(The Shepard company reported the incident to the United States Maritime Commission, which, in turn, advised the State Department.)

Chiang Advances Semi-Socialist Austerity Plan

Nanking, Sept. 15 (NYHT).—President Chiang Kai-shek called on the Chinese people tonight to join with the government in a nation-wide campaign against corruption, indolence, licentiousness and extravagance.

In a broadcast the Generalissimo announced an austerity program tinctured with semi-Socialist ideas. Angrily attacking the "social parasites in our midst," he presented a program for the general leveling of the living habits of the nation, to the end that life at the front may "move downward to the soldiers' level and life in the rear to the common people's level."

Paris Police Fight Mobs as 90,000 Strike

130 Hurt in 4 Hours Of Battling in Streets; Franc Hits New Low

Paris, Sept. 15 (AP).—More than 100 police and 30 workers were injured in four hours of street fighting today when 90,000 aviation, automobile and steel industry workers went on strike.

While a Communist spokesman for the General Confederation of Labor was telling Renault automobile workers to "strike until victory," the followers of Gen. Charles de Gaulle began their own nation-wide referendum on whether the voters want new elections.

The violence occurred as the French franc sank to a new low and Premier Henri Queuille hastily called a news conference to deny his government planned any drastic monetary steps.

Franc Drops Again

He denied specifically rumors in the French press that bank accounts would be frozen, free trading in gold would be suspended or there would be a "monetary manipulation." The franc dropped on the black market to 440 to the dollar as against the legal rate of 311.

The fighting broke out when a crowd of 4500 aviation workers marched down the Boulevard Haussman protesting the dismissal of 1700 employes of the nationalized aviation industry.

The crowd gathered in front of the aviation company headquarters with banners declaring "Down with the Marshall Plan," "We want bread," and "We want democratic government."

Workers Demand Meeting

The workers demanded a meeting with company representatives and the fight started over whether or not the labor delegation should have a police escort. Pushing and shoving led to fist fighting. In a few minutes the air was filled with paving stones and anything else on which the rioters could get their hands.

The strikers pulled up iron grill work around the trees, broke it into bars and began hurling the formidable missiles.

Fifteen of the police were injured seriously before reinforcements increased the steel-helmeted police and mobile guardsmen to about 2000.

The battling subsided in an

Indians' 10-Mile Drive Wins Homnabad, Road Junction

New Delhi, Sept. 15 (AP).—Indian forces, aided by parachute troops, today captured Homnabad, important road junction 84 miles west of the capital of Hyderabad, an army headquarters report said.

In the southeast sector, Indian troops advancing from Suriapet against stiff opposition squeezed even closer to Hyderabad City and its military suburb of Secunderabad, the report added.

A military informant in Madras predicted that those two cities—chief goals of the invading Indian armies—might be reached Thursday or Friday.

An Indian army spokesman here said Indian troops also captured Khammamet, a rail town 110 miles east of Hyderabad City. But he added Hyderabad state troops and Razakars, volunteer Moslem fighters, were digging in and that Indian troops were meeting much stiffer resistance.

The defense ministry reported also the surrender without opposition of Aurangabad, second largest city in the princely state, and its entire cantonment in the northwest. Indian forces claimed virtual control of the entire northwest corner of Hyderabad.

(A Karachi dispatch said Hyderabad officials had not confirmed surrender of Aurangabad. Hyderabad advices told of stiff fighting on the border of Berad, which adjoins the state on the north, and

The refreshing thing about Bob Mathias, 17-year-old "Youth of the Year," is a when-do-we-eat look, that sure-fire sympton of normality for any healthy youngster.

Bob proved himself superior to 34 of the world's outstanding athletes by winning the Olympic decathlon last month in England.

The decathlon is a gruelling test of skill and endurance covering two days of running (100 meters, 400 meters, 1500 meters), jumping (high jump, broad jump, hurdles and pole vault) and throwing (shotput, discus and javelin).

Since the California born and bred stripling has been hailed as superman, superboy, and the greatest all-round athlete since Jim Thorpe.

Those kingsize kudoes haven't visibly affected the blue-eyed, brown-haired youth, who's still a growing lad for all of his magnificent 6 feet 3 inches of height and 198 pounds of firmly packed frame.

He still recalls, sadly, that although he was fed a steak both for breakfast and dinner during the Olympic competition, he had naught but a skimpy luncheon box for the midday meal.

Bob's not fussy about food. Eats everything, he'll tell you. Naw, he doesn't go for spinach, and as to cereals, he eats them all. Lots of milk? Sure! Ice cream? Swell.

How did he get that big? He just grew up that way. His parents, Dr. and Mrs. Charles M. Mathias of Tulare, Calif., are themselves decended from a race of giants. And his brothers and sisters, ranging from Gene, 20, down through Jimmy, 14, and Patricia, 11, are all big, too.

The elder Mathias was a great footballer in his day. Bob just p'ays at everything, but admittedly perfers the discus throw, "it's easier."

With one exception Bob dresses as he behaves, quietly. The exception is a loud hand-painted tie. He handles himself gracefully, despite his bulk. He chews gum fast, and has a habit of sticking both hands into his trouser pockets when engaged in conversation.

Young Mathias likes movies, funny ones. Likes to read sports pages, naturally. Bangs the piano when he gets a chance, pounding out popular tunes by ear. He's a wonderful sleeper. "Bob has perfect relaxation," his mother once said. "He can fall asleep in 10 minutes, anyplace, anytime.

Sometimes, during an interview, Bob politely looks back at his interrogators as if to ask: "What's so unusual about that?" But being polite, Bob shrugs his fullback shoulders and tries to remember details of his childhood.

It appears that he first began showing promise of Herculean things to come in grammar school. He broad-jumped 15 feet in the sixth grade. At 14 he set a record with the 8-pound shot. He was as swift as a hare on the track.

Now enrolled at Kiskiminotas Spring Academy in western Pennsylvania, Bob has turned to football and in pluging away at French. His teacher at "Kiski" say he has a good head on his strong shoulders, and a keen determination to be—not so much a great athlete—but a great doctor. To this end, he'll enter Stanford next fall.

State Dept. Charges Aide With Neglect

'Job Well Done'

Greek Relief Relinquished By Griswold

By the United Press

Dwight P. Griswold yesterday resigned as chief of the American Aid Mission to Greece and told President Truman American help has saved the nation from communism. The President thanked him for "a job well done."

The former Governor of Nebraska called at the White House to make a final report on his 13-month tour of duty as supervisor of the 340 million dollars spent on military and economic aid in Greece.

He expressed belief that United States aid has kept Greece from "falling under Communist control" and said he is "certain now that Greece is not going to lose its independence."

Griswold's duties in Greece have been taken over by Henry F. Grady, United States Ambassador in Athens.

Questioned by reporters, Griswold doubted if the murder of George Poke, Columbia Broadcasting System correspondent, would ever be solved.

Polk's bound and bullet-shattered corpse was found in Salonika Bay last spring. He had been trying to reach Guerilla Leader Markos for an interview.

Griswold said he believed there was a "75 per cent chance" that Polk was killed by a Communist. There was "some chance," he added that the murder was committed by an "extreme rightist."

In either case, he said, he did not believe high officials of either faction ordered the murder.

The State Department has filed charges of neglect and dereliction of duty against Robert C. Alexander, assistant chief of its visa division, it was disclosed yesterday.

Alexander

Alexander was one of three State Department officials who told a congressional sub committee last July that hundreds of subversive aliens were entering the United States under United Nations credentials.

His testimony created a sensation at the time, but was found to be groundless by a 3-man committee of private citizens appointed by Secretary Marshall to investigate it. The committee found Alexander's story "irresponsible in its lack of factual support," and said he "had never made a persistent effort," to bring his worry about U. N. aliens to the attention of policy-making officials.

In bringing charges against Alexander the department risked the displeasure of Senator Chapman Revercomb, chairman of the subcommittee which took the testimony. Revercomb had defended the right of any subordinate official to testify without hindrance from his superiors.

A department spokesman said yesterday that Alexander had been charged under regular civil service procedure. The complaints against him were set forth in a letter sent to Alexander September 9, and no further step would be taken, the spokesman said, until Alexander had answered them.

Under civil service rules, Alexander has the right to reply fully. He also can have a public hearing before Aren K. Jean, the department's personnel chief who stated the charges against him.

After getting Alexander's reply, the department may decide to take no further action, or may issue a reprimand, or may even suspend or dismiss him, although dismissal was thought unlikely yesterday in view of Alexander's 31 years of service

In any event, Alexander can appeal to the Civil Service Commission to determine whether the department followed proper procedures. If the commission finds evidence of improper handling, it can order a new action.

Alexander declined yesterday to comment to a reporter, saying any statement would have to come from his lawyer. He is expected to base his defense on the argument that civil service employes are entitled to protection against retaliatory action prompted by testimony before congressional committees.

U. N. Nursery School Opens For Children of 13 Nations

By Peter Kihss

New York, Sept. 15 (NYHT).—An international nursery school—embracing 40 children of 13 nationalities—was launched yesterday by United Nations' secretariat and delegation members, who live together in a village housing project not far from Lake Success.

United Nations' folk had helped clean and paint up a three-room apartment and U. N. carpentry workers had built furniture, tot-size, for the younsters, aged 2 to 5. U. N. mothers had signed up to share the work.

For, along with a professional teaching staff comprising Miss Jean Methe and Miss Joan Lynn, every mother whose child was admitted had to promise three half-days' work a month on the manual jobs that take so much of a nursery's time—serving fruit juices, taking children to the bathroom and helping them with their clothes.

Not all the youngsters yet speak English. Miss Methe started to read them a story, but then changed over to a nursery rhyme, considering that the rhythm and sounds might at least be more comprehensible internationally. A Chinese youngster didn't speak English, but started humming a jingle, "Polly, Put the Kettle On."

Mrs. Mary Albright, of Canada, chairman of the school board, said the community's youngsters live together without problems of race or color. Her own 3-year-old daughter, Janet, she said, seems to have Chinese youngsters as her best friends.

Mothers came along yesterday, on the first day, to help the children adjust themselves as they got down to their blocks and paints, their clay models and dolls and a tropical fish tank which hasn't yet been populated.

New York, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—Pan American Airways announced today that winter fares to Alaska will be reduced 25 per cent from October 15 to April 15.

'Unfair' Loyalty Cases Listed

Chicago, Sept. 15 (AP).—At least 76 persons, including 56 scientists, have been victims of "allegedly unfair clearance procedures" involving loyalty, a committee of scientists said today it had been informed.

The report was made in the bulletin of the atomic scientists by the committee on secrecy and clearance of the Federation of American Scientists.

The committee mailed a general request to members of the federation last November asking information on any cases known to them involving allegedly unfair clearance procedures. Said the committee:

"In general, it is difficult to obtain such information. If an individual is denied clearance, he hesitates to inform even his friends because of the implied reflection on his character, however unwarranted the clearance denial may be. Therefore, the response to our request probably represents a small fraction of the total number of cases."

Without identifying the persons involved, the committee published a selected number of individual cases in detail. It said the facts published were taken directly from the letters received but that the committee had no way of checking the veracity of each letter.

Most of the letters published contended that the scientists left regular jobs to take up secret work after being advised that they had been cleared. Subsequently, they said, they were told their clearance was only temporary and they were asked to resign.

of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Other scientists told of limitations and expectations of atomic energy as a fuel; a new theory on sun radiations and their influences on the weather, and a theory of mathematical equations for human nerve impulses.

Dr. Daniels, professor of chemistry at the University of Wisconsin, explained one of today's main "foundations" for future ready conversion of solar energy to food and fuel. Essentially, it would telescope nature's old-fashioned, photosynthesis way of doing it.

But where the sun takes its own good time in photosynthesis (or process by which carbon dioxide and water are combined by sunlight in the presence of chlorophyl to give carbohydrates and other organic material), science should be able to do it instanter, he said.

Man's present inabilities to efficiently convert solar energy to his needs, he said, have largely resulted because the energy of sunlight is not sufficiently great to directly combine carbon dioxide and water. With chlorophyl now available, solar alchemists can complete the photosynthesis job, or should be able to, he said.

Thus, he summarized:

"When we have used up our coal and oil, exploited our available land with intensie farming, and trebled our population, the sun can satisfy our ever-increasing demands for food, fuel and power."

Deferring to Mr. Daniels, the second speaker at the energy symposium described atomic energy as occupying an intermediate position between present energy sources (coal, gasoline, etc.) and solar energy.

Perhaps, said Dr. Eugene P. Wigner, mathematical physicist of Princeton University, before atomic energy has had the chance to assert itself it will be superseded by solar energy. His paper, however, confined itself to present and near-future power applications of atomic energy.

Engineers, said Dr. Wigner, encounter two main problems in the practical use of atomic energy. One is the limitation of the heat transfer to power (atomic energy now gives off much more heat than can be utilized), and the second is the need of shields to protect users from deadly radiations.

Atomic energy as a source of power for automobiles is scarcely likely, he said. In the first place, the engines (or power plants) would be too bulky. Then, too, there would be dangers of "calamity" in accidents in which the radiation shields were broken, he said.

For space ships, said Dr. Wigner, atomic energy is also out. The excess heat it would give off in its conversion to power would "vaporize" the ship. But it could be used for ocean liners, which could accommodate the "power plants" and pass off the unused heat without danger, said Dr. Wigner.

Dr. Donald H. Menzel, Harvard astronomer, told of his theory on sun radiations and climate changes to delegates attending a symposium on "The Upper Atmosphere," at the Natural History Building auditorium, 10th st. and Constitution ave. nw. He also gave a new accounting for the four ice ages of the earth's past million years' existence.

Solar variability, or observed radiation changes of the sun, theorized Dr. Manzel, may well be responsible for the phenomena that causes no two summers to be exactly alike. If this is so, he added, long-range weather forecasting could be assured by intensive study of these radiations in correlation with the earth's weather.

These radiation-weather changes, he said, may represent cause and effect lags of from several days to a few months.

As to the earth's ice ages, he theorized that the sun in the earth's history has four times passed through "dark nebulae," or cosmic clouds of dust.

"A dark nebulae," said Dr. Menzel, "is so tenuous that the material between the earth and the sun would exert a negligible effect on the amount of heat and light reaching us."

What might have happened, he explained, is that clouds of "dust" reflected radiation back to the earth, that the earth was warmed, evaporation was excessive, and that snow fell and packed heavily about the poles in high transport of the moisture-laden air. Finally, these snowpacks expanded and moved "like molasses" to creep over former temperate climes.

"The theory," said Dr. Menzel, "has never before been advanced to my knowledge."

As consolation to the public, he added, "there are no known dark nebulae in the sun's present relation to the earth which could lead to forecast of another glacial period."

The mathematical resolution of part of the nervous system, the nerve fiber, was explained for the first time last night by Dr. Arturo Rosenblueth, physiologist, of Mexico City. He spoke at Commerce Auditorium, 14th st. between E st. and Constitution ave. nw., in a special lecture on his findings.

Although little practical value was immediately attached to the work, it was conceded that further experiments may eventually open the way to more effective treatment of mental disorders.

science and our organization and so profoundly humiliates us. We are entirely unable to determine the responsibility for it."

Dr. Harlow Shapley, executive committee chairman, said: "Personally I am ashamed beyond words that such an incident could and did occur."

The Ethiopian legation has made an informal oral protest to the Department of State, it was learned last night, and the Department has informally expressed its regret.

Haddis Alemayehou, first secretary of the legation, said "The minister was profoundly shocked by the incident. We did not expect any such thing to happen in the United States and particularly in "Washington."

Alemayehou said the minister, an invited guest, was sitting in his designated seat in the diplomatic section, when the usher told him he was in the wrong section and would be moved. Te new seat was not in the diplomatic section, he said, so the minister left.

Fred Hand, manager of the hall, said the incident was news to him, and he emphasized that the DAR had nothing to do with it.

Reds' Scientists Plead 'Busy' on Atom Parley Bid

Birmingham, England, Sept. 15 (NYHT).—Russian atom physicists are hard at work, much too hard to be able to afford the time to attend international conferences, the meeting on 'problems of nuclear physics" at the University of Birmingham was told today in a cablegram from the president of the Russian Academy of Science.

The message was received in answer to an invitation to the conference, which is being attended by scientists from most of Europe and the United States. Countries behind the iron curtain are represented solely by three Polish delegates.

Pressure of work did not prevent the United States from sending an imposing delegation of 15.

Reds Plan Secret Trial for Berliner

Berlin, Sept. 15 (AP).—American authorities said they believed an important German official in the Berlin government was to be given a secret trial by the Russians today.

Dr. Curt Mueckenberger, former manager of the Berlin central coal organization, was arrested by the Russians a month ago after they had removed him from office for an "uncooperative attitude." Nothing since has been heard from him.

An American announcement said the Russians had no authority to fire an official working for the city government and no authority to arrest him. The statement added that it appeared the only charge against him was his refusal to obey an order which the Soviet authorities were not competent to give.

His trial, however, would be in line with Soviet efforts to squeeze out the regular city government and substitute their own.

"We were informed that Dr. Mueckenberger is to be tried in closed session and that no outside observers will be permitted to attend the trial," said the American statement.

Soviet news sources had not reported the proceedings, however, up to 7 p. m.

Except for a war of words Berlin was calm today.

In the latest exchange, an official British spokesman advised a Soviet general that he had a swelled head.

The remark was addressed to Maj. Gen. Alexander Kotikov, who has been styling himself "commandant of Berlin," although his word is law only in the Soviet sector.

The British spokesman told Kotikov he was guilty of a "piece of calculated self-inflation."

In Frankfurt, Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American military governor, told a news conference he did not take any stock in German press reports that the Communists were getting ready for a putsch to take over western Berlin after the United States elections.

Airlift to Get 40 More C-54s

John P. Whitney, deputy commander of the Military Air Transport Service, told a news conference the airlift was now delivering nearly 4000 tons a day to Berlin. Air deliveries through Tuesday, 81st day of the operation, totalled 158,887 tons in 23,373 flights, he said.

The Air Force announcement indicated little hope on the part of military officals here that the Berlin blockade would be lifted. With 105 C-54s and 133 C-47s engaged in "Operation Vittles," the additional C-54s will bring total aircraft in the operation to 278.

Use Expanded Bases

The Air Force said the 40 new aircraft were being withdrawn from bases throughout the world, including the Far East. They will use expanded airport facilities recently completed in Berlin.

Admiral Whitney pointed out that while the Navy was not actively engaged in the Berlin airlift itself, it was supporting the operation ndirectly. He pointed out that a Navy transport squadron recently left Patuxent, Md., and now is flying the North Atlantic feeding Operation Vittles.

The Navy, he went on, has taken over the bulk of air supply in the Pacific and is using its huge Mars flying boats for this purpose.

The Berlin airlift, Whitney said, was operating with "clockilke regularity" and added that the high command was "completely satisfied."

New Planes Revealed

Whitney cautioned, however, that "winter weather is going to impose great difficulties." He declined to say to what extent Operation Vittles could meet the winter's requirements for fuel, admittedly the crucial factor in the Berlin situation.

Whitney, who has just returned from a three-week tour of MATS bases and operations throughout Europe, Africa and the Near East, said transports on the Berlin airlift were operating about 65 per cent of full time. They were being supported, he explained, by "elaborate" maintenance procedures which included return to three bases in the United States for 1000-hour checks and engine changes.

The Air Force announced also during the day that several combat aircraft previously secret were being built. Mostly jet or rocket-powered, their speeds were said to approach supersonic.

These aircraft, the Air Force said, were jet fighters, some with rockets for extra speed or altitude, and several designed for supersonic speeds. There also was one bomber combining jet and propeller power, designed for high speeds and payload capacity.

75 Miles From Goal

The Indian troops stabbed three miles forward from Suriapet, bringing them to within 75 miles of their goal, aand their advance is continuing, defense headquarters said. Indian aircraft is supporting the ground troops.

Capture of Homnabad represented a 10-mile advance from Bajasur, which fell yesterday.

The town is less than 30 miles from Bidar, reputedly a stronghold of the Razakars.

Aurangabad, 275 miles northwest of Hyderabad City, surrendered without firing a shot, the defense ministry said. Indian troops were placed on guard around the mosque, which is a tomb for the eighteenth century mogul emperor, Aurangzeb and his wife.

From the captured rail point of Jalna the Indian troops advanced 40 miles and entered Parbhani District.

U. S. Deeply Concerned Over War, Marshall Says

The United States is deeply concerned over the fighting between India and Hyderabad, Secretary Marshall told his press conference yesterday. The Secretary said the United States was disturbed by the resort to arms to settle differences instead of continuing peaceful negotiations.

Marshall Urges Maximum Chest Drive Support

"A personal appeal for maximum support" of the Red Feather Campaign was made yesterday by Secretary of State George C. Marshall to all State Department workers.

Secretary Marshall told staff workers, "Directly or indirectly we all receive benefits from this community enterprise, often without realizing it." He asked department employes to "contribute as generously as possible."

Secretary Marshall is chairman of the State Department Red Feather organization, which is part of the Government unit. Goal in the area-wide campaign is $4,566,790.

Patience Vital in U. N., Declares Marshall

through peaceful methods of settlement.

"Military force is a dangerous substitute."

He said many people are impatient at what they consider the shortcomings of the United Nations because they forget, for one thing, that a change in the Charter requires a two-thirds majority of 58 member countries.

"The American likes to get things done in a hurry," the Secretary said, "and overlooks the fact that others do not move at the same pace." And he reminded members of the legal profession that they were "admirably fitted to temper the wind of public criticism arising from misunderstanding and impatience."

Patience Essential

He contended that the development of the U. N. Charter required more patience and tolerance than the development of the American Constitution a century ago. He insisted that it was "little short of miraculous" to have created the U. N. as a "going concern" out of so many diverse elements, and so soon after the end of the war.

"To disrupt it would be a tragic error," he declared, thus repeating an argument he made before the House Foreign Affairs Committee last spring, during hearings on possible revision of the Charter.

"You are all aware," he said, "that we have not had a real state of peace since the end of hostilities, and that the task imposed on the United Nations has been far more than it was designed to handle, certainly at this early stage of its development."

Genuine Tolerance Needed

The central problem facing the United Nations, he argued, was the need of developing a rule of law, based on acceptance by sovereign nations which "have long been accustomed to being a law unto themselves." He thought it impressive that the Charter was already acknowledged as the overriding standard of conduct among nations.

"No government debates its case in the United Nations on the basis of a cynical disregard for the Charter," he said, "nor does any government like to admit or have it said that it is acting in violation of the Charter."

He ended his speech with an appeal to remember that world law could not be a mere extension of Anglo-Saxon law; that "it must necessarily be a blend of many concepts and systems."

"A genuine spirit of tolerance and understanding is the first ingredient in making the kind of world we want," he said. "The spirit, combined with patience, determination and hard work, and applied through the United Nations, can advance us toward the goal of a peaceful community of nations governed by a system of law respected by all. Here at home the passions of the moment must not be permitted to dim the great fundamentals of our system."

Secretary Marshall showed no optimism over the Berlin crisis yesterday when he held his last press conference before going to Paris for the United Nations Assembly.

A reporter asked him whether he agreed with former Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden's recent statement that the international situation seemed to be going from bad to worse.

Marshall said he himself had not had any period of great relief in the past week or 10 days, and would welcome any encouragement.

He thought Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg had made a very fine statement in New York last week, emphasizing the unity of the American people over the Berlin situation. The Secretary declined, however, to comment on the latest discussions in Moscow, or to predict whether there would be further negotiations between Russia and the Western powers.

One remark of Marshall's indicated that he was leaving himself free to return to Washington at any time during the Paris Assembly, or to go to any other European capital, if necessary. He said he had no plans to go to Berlin during his stay abroad, but during the next period of weeks would go wherever he thought the best interests of the United States lay.

The Assembly in Paris, scheduled to start September 21, is expected to last almost three months, and the Secretary plans to leave Washington by air next Sunday.

Bevin Says Reds Plan Asiatic Grab

London, Sept. 15 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin charged today that the Communists are following a plan aimed at seizure of southeast Asia.

He told Parliament it was a part of the grand strategy of world communism for stirring up civil wars everywhere and "no one can see the end of it."

Anthony Eden, the Conservative Party spokesman, pointed to Communist uprisings in Malaya and Burma as "part of a plan" and recalled that Lenin referred to southeast Asia as the "back door of capitalist and imperialist power."

Bevin told a tense and sometimes turbulent House of Commons that the scheme for stirring up civil war was an instrument of foreign policy, and that if it continues, "then no one can see the end to which it may lead the nations who are promoting it.

"But if Britain and the British Commonwealth are now seized with the effects of this policy, we shall do our best to stamp it out and we shall use the best of our resources to do it.

"If we do not do it, no settlement of peace will be possible nor will there be harmony in the world at all."

Bevin made no mention of any Communist nation by name.

Although Eden agreed with Bevin in respect to Communist aims, the deputy Conservative Party leader criticized sharply the Labor Government's policy. The international affairs debate followed yesterday's government announcement of a rearmament program and extension of the service of drafted men for three months.

Labor Party Parliament members today approved the draft extension and said no opposition was expected from the party rank and file.

Eden sought unsuccessfully to obtain a government declaration on the clash between India and Hyderabad. Bevin refused to debate it on the grounds the matter will be considered by the United Nations Security Council Thursday under chairmanship of a Briton, Sir Alexander Cadogan.

Bevin, answering Eden's appeal for elucidation of the government's attitude toward a western European federation, told the Commons he disapproved of all such plans advanced to date.

Instead he proposed a "step by step" creation of an association modeled on the British Commonwealth.

Philippines Ask World Bank for Power Plant Aid

The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development announced yesterday that it has received a formal application from the Government of the Philippines for a loan to finance the foreign exchange cost of four hydroelectric power projects and a fertilizer plant. The amount required was not stated in the application.

The request was received during conversations which have been taking place in Washington during the past few weeks with a financial and technical mission sent to Washington by the President of the Philippines, headed by Secretary of Finance Miguel Cuaderno. The parleys are covering the program of the Philippine government for the rehabilitation and development of the country's economy and are termed the most comprehensive which the bank has yet undertaken with a member country. They will provide essential background for consideration of the present application.

Toll of 35 American Dead In Korea Train Crash May Rise

Seoul, Sept. 15 (AP).—A train collision south of Seoul last night killed 18 United States soldiers and injured 80 more—most of them home-bound from duty in Korea—in the worst disaster of the occupation.

The Army, announcing the figures, said five of the injured were in serious condition. Two Korean children were killed and 40 Koreans were injured.

The dead and injured were being brought to Seoul, where the task of identification was begun as doctors and nurses toiled over the living victims.

The Americans' train was coming up from Pusan (Fusan), An occupation point of southwest Korea. A washout had required the train to leave the direct line to Seoul and take the west coast route.

At Napnim, a village on the west coast about 75 miles south of Seoul, the train made an unscheduled stop, probably due to mechanical trouble.

The station is less than a quarter of a mile from a tuunel, out of which roared the fast express from Mokpo (Moppo), on the southwest coast, headed for Seoul.

It had no headlight and there was no red light at the end of the standing train, said Charles Mc Cafferty, 29, Chicago, a labor relations adviser of the military government.

He, M. E. Penry of Flushing, N. Y., and an unidentified military policeman shouted warnings to the 30 persons in the rear coach and all but one escaped just before the express locomotive struck.

McCafferty said the express engineer apparently saw the standing train when about 50 yards away. He applied the brakes but the train smashed part way though the rear coach.

The rear coach shot off its trucks and telescoped into the second coach, where most of the casualties were.

Austrian Communists Strike Against Prices

Vienna, Austria, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—The Communists called strikes today at several points in the British and Russian occupation zones to protest the high cost of living, but the most effective one lasted only seven hours.

Minister of Labor Karl Maisel said, the Communists suffered an "extremely sorry defeat." Government sources said the Communists had aimed at a general strike, but the walkout affected only a few Russian-operated plants and Communist strongholds.

Confidentially, Mr. Phipps, it shrinks:

. . . and how it shrinks! Butter on the gold standard. Beefsteak a dollar a bite. No, the old green buck ain't what it used to be. That is, until you walk into Bond's. And right there, you'll start singing a happier tune!

Some folks insist we're whacky. They'll tell you that when costs go up, the public must pay. We say "nuts to that".

We figure it this way. Fine worsteds--the only kind we'll ever show you--cost us an average of 50 cents a yard more. Bond needleworkers draw more money, too. BUT--instead of boosting all our suit prices, we've decided to sit tight, get more business--and let bigger volume rub out a big chunk of our increased costs. Instead of selling a hundred suits, we'll hold the line, try to sell two hundred --and beat the rise that way.

It takes nerve! But we've proved again and again that it works swell for everyone. You get a break--and so do we!

Step into your Bond store, ask for one of our popular Style Manor Suits, and you'll see the same smooth worsteds, the same fine needlework--and the same familiar price tag - 37.75.

Set your sights on our famous Park Lane Quality, and you'll find America's topflight fabrics handsomely tailored in 81 different sizes and models--at one low price you paid last spring - 45.75.

Decide you want the luxury and fine hand-detailing of our Rochester fashioned Executive Group Suits, and we'll show you a grand selection at a price you'll recall with pleasure!- 51.75.

That's "the Bond way", Mr. Phipps! The way America's largest outfitter to men again puts new life into your rapidly shrinking greenbacks. We think you'll agree that it makes sense!

Export Fraud Curb Held Up, Klaus Says

A former Commerce Department official testified yesterday that he submitted in May a set of regulations designed to end violations of export control rules, but that despite new evidence of irregularities in shipments, the regulations are still not in effect.

Samuel Klaus gave this testimony to mombers of the Senate Investigations Subcommittee and the Senate Small Business Committee. Earlier, they heard that a New York exporter coated hard-to-get iron soil pipe with cement in order to "preserve" it for export; that a six-million pound shipment of flour destined for Liberia wound up by mistake in the black market in Lebanon; that an unidentified shipper exported large quantities of scarce streptomycin to Argentina by misrepresenting the shipments.

ROBERT M. MISTROUCH
Reluctant to talk

Klaus, a State Department official, said he was on loan to the Commerce Department in January as a special assistant and adviser on enforcement of export controls. Late in May, he testified, he submitted the final draft of a set of enforcement regulations, which he said had been approved by shippers, steamship firms, many bankers and others.

The regulations would have required that if a freight forwarder, insurance firm, bank, steamship firm or any one else handling an outgoing shipment suspected that there was a violation of export control rules, the shipment would have been held up.

The regulations would provide for checks on the transshipment of goods once they arrived abroad, in order to prevent them from going into black markets or to Soviet satellite countries.

Klaus said he returned to the State Department July 1, but that his proposed regulations are "still pending."

S. Allen Moorefield, a Commerce Department official, testified that the six million pounds of flour got into the black market in Lebanon because a department clerk made a mistake that wasn't corrected for fear of "embarrassing" the L. N. White Co., the shipper. The company was not further identified.

Charles R. Clark, a customs agent, told the Senators that one firm, whose name he withheld at the request of the committees, succeeded in making 12 shipments of streptomycin to Argentina by fraudulent means. The shipments were represented as being worth $37,969, but actually were valued at $173,370, he said.

Clark said the shipper labeled some boxes as containing "empty glass vials," for which no export license is required. Actually the boxes were found to contain streptomycin.

Robert M. Mistrough of New York, an exporter, testified that he ordered the iron soil pipe dipped in cement. He admitted that he had read in a trade paper that concrete pipe did not require export licensing, but insisted that he had not acted to evade export license regulations, but only to "preserve" the pipe. Senator Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.) termed his story "fantastic."

AFL Throws Support Behind 18 Democrats in Senate Race

By The Associated Press

The AFL Political League yesterday threw its support behind 18 Democratic candidates for the Senate. A turnover of only four seats there would tak control from the Republicans.

The GOP took command of the Senate just last year after long years of Democratic rule. But their 51-to-45 majority must stand the test of several pparently close contests in November. On the other hand, most Democratic seats at stake are in the solid South with reelection assured.

AFL League Director Joseph Keenan threw out the new challenge to Republican senatorial candidates after having blackballed eight the day before because of their stand on the Taft-Hartley Law, bitterly denounced by labor unions.

4 GOP Seats Threatened

Reports to the GOP Campaign Committee were said to indicate that four Republican Senate seats are threatened. The candidates, all under attack by the AFL League, are Senators Revercomb of West Virginia, Ball of Minnesota and Robertson of Wyoming, and Representative Rizley, GOP nominee for the Senate in Oklahoma.

The Republicans were said to regard their chances as good for gaining a Democratic seat in Montana and about even for capturing another in Colorado, with a lesser possibility in New Mexico.

Governor Dewey, GOP Presidential candidate, is expeteed to visit all these States, together with other key spots in the struggle for Senate control.

The threat to party hopes of holding both House and Senate while invading the White House spurred new activity at GOP headquarters. Senator Capehart (R., Ind.) said he had accepted an invitation to go along on Dewey's western tour next week in the interest of the party's senatorial candidates.

Democrats Listed

The AFL Political League listed these Democrats it will back against the eight Republicans it already had condemned:

Idaho: Judge Burton Miller against Senator Henry Dworshak (R).

Minnesota: Hubert Humphrey, mayor of Minneapolis, against Senator Joseph H. Ball (R.) Humphrey is a Democrat-Farmer-Labor candidate.

Illinois: Paul Douglass against Senator C. Wayland Brooks (R.).

Wyoming: Gov. Lester C. Hunt against Senator Edward V. Robertson (R.).

West Virginia: Matthew M. Neely, former Governor, United States House member and Senator, against Senator Chapman Revercomb (R.).

Iowa: Guy M. Gillette, former Governor and Senator, against Senator George A. Wilson (R.).

New Mexico: Clinton P. Anderson, former United States House member and Secretary of Agriculture, against Patrick Hurley (R.), former Secretary of War. Senator Hatch (D.) did not seek renomination.

Oklahoma: Robert S. Kerr, former Governor, against Ross Rizley (R.), now a United States Representative. Senator Moore (R.) did not run.

In addition, AFL League Director Keenan said, these 10 Democratic senatorial candidates will be supported:

Senators Theodore F. Green (R. I.), James E. Murray (Mont.), Edwin C. Johnson (Colo.), and John J. Sparkman (Ala.), all seeking reelection, along with J. Alan Frear of Delaware, former United States Representative Frank Hook of Michigan, Archibald S. Alexander of New Jersey, United States Representative Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, former Gov. J. Melville Broughton of North Carolina, and Russell Long of Louisiana, son of the late Senator Huey P. Long.

Rheumatic Disease Fund Drive Slated

A national campaign to raise two million dollars to fight rheumatic diseases was announced here yesterday by Dr. W. Paul Holbrook of Tucson, Ariz., president of the newly formed Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation.

It will begin November 15 and is scheduled to end December 11, Dr. Holbrook told a luncheon assembly of science writers here to cover the centenary sessions of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The part the even newer District Foundation for Rheumatic Diseases will play in the national drive had not been fully determined yesterday. Mrs. Joseph F. Elward, 4441 Hawthorne st. nw., founder of the local corporation, said her organization would "probably" join in the national drive.

The District corporation's tentative plans to begin its own drive late this month, Mrs. Elward said, will likely be "shelved" in favor of cooperation with the larger organization. National campaign plans provide that participating local groups retain one half of contributions collected locally.

In a statement announcing the national campaign, Floyd B. Odlum, chairman of the board of ARF, stressed the need for medical work in the rheumatic field.

"The defeat of arthritis, the Nation's No. 1 crippler, has been a task long neglected by organized medicine and research organizations," declared Odlum, president of the Atlas Corp.

"There are seven million Americans who are afflicted in some measure with rheumatism," he said. "Only 1 per cent of rheumatism patients are able to get hospital care. Only $200,000 is spent each year in medical research, which includes cost of the care of patients under observation."

Dr. Holbrook said the medical research financed by ARF will be coordinated by the National Research Council, which now has a special committee for survey of research on rheumatic diseases. The committee is headed by Dr. Walter Bauer of Boston, associate professor of medicine at Harvard Medical School, who attended yesterday's luncheon.

Bethesda Battle

Neighbors Go to Bat For Chimes

New gains were scored by the Navy yesterday in the battle of the chimes on the eighteenth floor of Bethesda Naval Medical Center.

Embattled admirals have braved a withering crossfire of verbal fire from some nearly residents. The complainants say the chimes and music heart ove ra 2-mile area are nerve-jarring, sleep-destroying and obnoxious."

But yesterday 32 members of the Locust Hill Estates Citizens Association who live just north of the hospital sent the Navy a resolution favoring them.

Following a meeting at her home Tuesday night, Mrs Rudolf D. Schneider, 4703 Elmhurst lane, who is secretary of the group, said she had been directed to write Rear Admiral M. D. Willcutts, commanding officer of the center, encouraging him to play more music and chimes.

"We have enjoyed the chimes," said Mrs. Schneider, "and have missed them since they began playing them only once a day instead of four times a day."

A Navy spokesman said the chimes were used frequently after being installed last December "but when the complaints started coming in, we began using them only once a day." The spokesman said the Navy plans to continue using them because there is more favorable than unfavorable comment.

30 Planes Comb Manitoba for Lost U. S. Craft

The Pas, Manitoba, Sept. 15 (U.P.)—Thirty planes combed the wastes of Manitoba today for a U. S. Navy C-45 Beechcraft plane, missing since Sunday with five persons aboard.

Search officials said they had received a report that the plane had been seen Sunday over Setting Lake, some 60 miles north of Lake Winnipeg, and only 35 miles off the plane's scheduled course.

Three Lancaster planes took off at once to search that area more thoroughly. The plane, with the British and American naval attaches stationed in Ottawa aboard, disappeared en route to the Pas from Churchill, Manitoba. The American is Capt. Benjamin Scott Custer, of 8 Oxford st., Chevy Chase, Md.

Psychic Experiences Studied, Parapsychologists Disclose

Parapsychologists who have satisfied themselves that telepathy works in card tests are now turning attention to reports of "spontaneous experiences" it was disclosed here yesterday.

"Spontaneous experiences" are those unexplainable accounts by persons who "dream" of events as those events are actually happening at distant points.

Activities of the parapsychologists, who devote their efforts to phenonema transcending natural laws, were unveiled in symposium held here yesterday by the recently-formed Society of Parapsychology. The meetings were in the auditorium of the new Interior Department building.

Card Tests Conducted

Chief among yesterday's speakers were Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Rhine of Durham, N. C. He is director of the parapsychology laboratory at Duke University and author of "Reach of the Mind." She is his wife, and laboratory assistant.

Dr. Rhine said card tests at the university have "proved beyond doubt" that many persons can call the turn of cards "better than chance alone permits." In the tests, he said, the subject attempts to identify which of five cards is being turned over in a room separate from that in which he is seated.

Mrs. Rhine said she is compiling data on reports from persons who say they have had "spontaneous experiences." Of particular importance, she said, may be the "blocks" of those reported experiences.

'Blocks' Explained

A "block," she explained, is some factor that disrupts the image. In but mildly psychic persons, she explained, "spontaneous experiences" are "blocked at their start, and the person is conscious only of "vague uneasiness" or "a troubled mind."

Thus, the person learns later that the "vague uneasiness" occurred at precisely the same time as death or serious trouble of a loved one far away.

In others, said Mrs. Rhine, the "block" may arrest psychic manifestation just before the person is able to comprehend the meaning of the telepathic transmission; in still others, she added, the "images" appear in symbols that need translation to understand their full meanings.

In any event, most of the more than 60 reputable scientists who attended yesterday's meetings agreed that parapsychology is a fascinating avocation.

Trailer Camp Fees Boosted

Fairfax County trailer camp license fees were increased 15-fold yesterday by the county board of supervisors in an attempt to raise revenue and rid the county of what board members termed undesirable camps.

Under the new law, which takes effect January 1, 1949, camp operators must pay the county $50 on each trailed lot. At present, the county has an involved fee system under which the operator pays a blanket fee of $25 for the first eight trailer lots and $5 each on two thirds of the number of lots he operates above the eight.

Persons attending the public hearing said trailer families put a burden on the school system and received police and fire protection without paying their fair share of taxes.

Attorney William D. Medley, representing a group of camp operators, presented figures showing that for each 100 trailers there are only 16 children in public schools.

Sixty-nine per cent of the trailer owners in the county are World War II veterans, Medley said. He asked that the license fee be set at $5 per lot with a minimum of $50.

The board also:

1. Refused a request of the Virginia Electric & Power Co. for permission to build a substation near Hollin Hall in the southeastern part of the county. Residents claimed it would hurt their property values, though Vepco Vice President J. W. Howard said the structure was needed.

2. Instructed Commonwealth's Attorney Hugh B. Marsh to find out why the Madeira School, a private girls' school, pays no taxes to the county.

District Woman Held On Md. Loan Charge

Mary Elizabeth Chapman, 26, of 1320 B st. se., yesterday was held in $500 bond in Montgomery County on charges of using a fictitious name in securing loans from lending agencies.

The woman was arrested by Detective Corpl. Frank Briggs of the Montgomery County police.

She will stand trial on charges of false pretenses September 21.

In Alexandria

Police-Killer Hunt Yields Burglar

Alexandria police last night were still looking for the slayer of Policeman Robert B. Harris, but their frantic manhunt has produced fruit of another kind.

James Joseph Earl Davis, 20, one of many suspects questioned, told police yesterday he couldn't have killed Harris because he was busy breaking into a gasoline station at 2:45 a. m. last Saturday when the fatal shooting occurred.

Detective Inspector Russell A. Hawes said the station cited by Davis is located at Oronoco and Henry sts., in Alexandria. The 19 nickels found on Davis were identified as the total amount taken from the station, Hawes said.

Davis was charged with housebreaking.

Policeman Harris was shot as he made a routine check in the rear of the Howard Johnson restaurant at N. Washington and Montgomery sts.

Among other suspects still being questioned, Hawes said, is one who was near the scene at the time of the killing, and another who woke his employer at 4 a. m. Saturday to borrow money and was arrested as he was leaving town.

Man, 25, Is Held On Sex Charge Against Niece, 7

A 25-year-old carpenter's helper was jailed yesterday and held for grand jury action on a charge of having carnal relations with his 7-year-old niece.

The defendant, Harry W. Peed, 831 4th st. ne., was ordered held after a preliminary hearing in Municipal Court before Judge Aubrey B. Fennell, who refused to allow bond.

The offense, also called statutory rape, may result in the death penalty if the convicting jury should recommend it.

According to witnesses, Peed had sexual relations with the girl on Saturday in a downtown moving picture theater.

Professor Named AAAS Secretary

Dr. Howard A. Meyerhoff, professor of geology at Smith College, Northampton, Mass., has been appointed administrative secretary of the American Association for Advancement of Science, it was announced last night.

He will succeed Dr. Forest Ray Moulton, astronomer, who held the post for 12 years. Dr. Moulton will retire at the end of the year.

Announcement of Dr. Meyerhoff's appointment was made by Edward W. Sinnott, AAAS president, during sessions of the AAAS Centenary here.

Minnesota Names Ball, Humphrey

Minneapolis, Sept. 15 (AP).—A bitter critic and an outspoken defender of the Taft-Hartley Act will compete November 2 for one of Minnesota's U. S. Senate seats.

Democratic-Farmer-Laborites chose Hubert Humphrey, Minneapolis mayor, as their candidate in Tuesday's primary. He advocates repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act. Republicans renominated Senator Joseph H. Ball, who helped write it.

Gov. Luther Youngdahl, Republican, was renominated over State Auditor Stafford King, and Charles L. Halsted, a "regular" was nominated for Governor by the Democratic-Farmer-Laborites.

Other State office holders, all Republicans, were renominated. DFL regulars won three of the State office nominations at stake. "Progressives" were in the lead for two.

Seven Republican Congressmen were renominated. One contest, in the Second District, still was in doubt. DFL "regulars" appeared certain of nomination in four districts, with others in doubt.

Former Gov. Harold Stassen's choice, William Berlin, won the nomination in the Eighth District. The second congressional candidate he indorsed, State Senator Val Imm, was trailing Representative Joseph P. O'Hara, Republican incumbent.

Johnson Sweeps Colorado 5 to 2

Denver, Sept. 15 (AP).—A Democratic veteran and a Republican newcomer will fight for Colorado's key seat in the United States Senate.

Johnson

Senator Edwin C. Johnson, 64, and never a loser in 26 years in politics, carried every county in yesterday's primary election. He rolled up a five-to-two lead over Eugene Cervi, avowed New Dealer.

Will F. Nicholson, 48, Denver businessman and veteran of both World Wars, won the GOP nomination. In his first political campaign, he defeated former Governer John C. Vivian by about 6000 votes.

The four incumbent Representatives had no primary opposition. Neither did their opponents, nor the gubernatorial nominees, Democratic Governor Lee Knows or Republican State Representative David A. Hamel.

Washington Names Wallgren, Langlie

Seattle, Sept. 15 (AP).—Gov. Mon C. Wallgren and former Gov. Arthur B. Langlie will be the major party candidates for Washington's executive mansion in November.

Former Senator Wallgren, intimate of President Truman, defeated Langlie in 1944. State Treasurer Russell Fluent also will seek the governorship as the Progressive Party candidate.

Wallgren won the Democratic nomination yesterday, defeating former Gov. Clarence D. Martin. Langlie had a 4-to-1 margin over the total vote of six opponents for the Republican nomination.

All incumbent Congressmen won renomination easily. Three of them were unopposed. Hugh B. Mitchell who served Wallgren's unexpired Senate term by appointment after Wallgren became Governor in 1944, won the Democratic nomination in the First Congressional District (Seattle-Bremerton). He will oppose Representative Homer T. Jones in the November election.

Williams, Laborite, To Confront Sigler

Detroit, Sept. 15 (AP).—Labor boosted its own personality kid into the ring today to test the political charm of Gov. Kim Sigler.

He is handsome, well-born and well-educated G. Mennen Williams, 37, who won the Democratic nomination for Governor with labor backing in a nip-and-tuck fight with two older and more experienced opponents. Sigler had no primary opposition.

Another youngster, John W. Connally, 36, won the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor.

Williams, a war veteran, is the grandson of the founder of a fortune in soaps and toiletries. Balancing this background of society and wealth are his years as a "New Deal" attorney in Michigan and Washington and his attitude toward labor.

The only major upset in the primary was that of Representative Bartel J. Jonkman, seeking his sixth term in Grand Rapids' Fifth District. Gerald R. Ford, jr., a 35-year-old former football star at the University of Michigan, dumped Jonkman and won the right to try for the House seat in November.

All other Congressmen with opposition won renomination.

Senator Homer Ferguson, the Republican incumbent, had no primary opposition. Neither did former Democratic Congressman Frank Hook of Ironwood who will oppose him in November.

GOP in N. H. Names Adams for Governor

Concord, N. H., Sept. 15 (AP).—Former Congressman Sherman Adams yesterday scored a five to one victory to take New Hampshire's GOP gubernatorial nomination, tantamount to election in this traditionally Republican State.

Adams defeated John R. McIntire by 38,792 to 7650.

Democratic State Chairman Herbert W. Hill, Dartmouth College professor, won nomination for Governor from Harry Carlson, ousted National Committeeman who bolted Truman in Philadelphia to support Eisenhower. Hill topped Carlson, 10,631 to 9141.

Alfred E. Fortin, former Manchester alderman, pushed out the Democratic Party's choice, Joseph A. Millimet, in the race for the United States Senate nomination, 11,716 to 7540.

Republican Congressman Norris Cotton won the GOP nomination in a walk over two opponents in his bid for reelection to Congress from the Second District.

United States Senator Styles Bridges, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, won he, GOP nomination without opposition in his bid for a third term.

In the First Congressional District there was no contest. Competing in November will be GOP Congressman Chester Merrow, for a fourth term, and Peter A. Poirier of Manchester, former executive councilor.

Vermont Renames Gibson for Governor

Montpelier, Vt., Sept. 15 (U.P.).—Republican Gov. Ernest W. Gibson of Vermont won renomination for a second term by a margin of some 6000 votes, virtually complete returns from the State primary showed today.

After trailing in early balloting, Gibson, 47, pulled away from Lieut. Gov. Lee E. Emerson, his only opponent for the GOP nomination, considered tantamount to election in traditionally Republican Vermont.

In the only other major contest, 73-year-old incumbent Charles A. Plumley of Northfield defeated four rivals for the GOP nomination to the State's lone seat in the House of Representatives.

Bradford, Dever Nominated in Mass.

Boston, Sept. 15 (AP).—Republican Gov. Robert F. Brandford and Democratic Paul A. Dever were nominated yesterday as November rivals for the Massachusetts governorship.

Complete returns from the State's 1821 precincts gave Dever 218,611 votes and Bradford 209,092. Former Gov. Maurice J. Tobin got 66,570 votes in the Democratic primary though he withdrew from the race after being elevated to Secretary of Labor by President Truman.

Democratic Charles F. Jeff Sullivan, Mayor of Worcester, will oppose Lieut. Gov. Arthur W. Coolidge in the November race for the latter office.

The Democrats chose John I. Fitzgerald, a former Boston City councilor, to run against United States Senator Leverett Saltonstall, unopposed in the Republican primary.

Only two of the State's 14 congressmen had opposition in yesterday's primary and both won.

Representative Angier L. Goodwin (R.) in the Eighth District emerged winner in a four-man contest with a 3130-vote plurality over Mayor Walter E. Lawrence of Medford, his closest opponent.

Representative Donald W. Nicholson (R.), elected last year to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Representative Charles L. Gifford in the Ninth District, easily won renomination over two opponents.

Four Bay State congressmen had no opposition in the primary and face none in November. They are Representative John W. McCormack, House Democratic whip, in the Twelfth District; Representative John F. Kennedy (D.) in the Eleventh District; Representative George J. Bates (R.) in the Sixth District, aand Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R.) in the Fifth District.

Eight others were unopposed in the primary but must campaign against rival party nominees in November. They are Republicans John W. Heselton, First District; Charles R. Clason, Second District; Christian A. Herter, Tenth District; Richard B. Wigglesworth, Thirteenth District; House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Fourteenth District; and Democrats Philip J. Philbin, Third District; Harold D. Donohue, Fourth District, and Thomas J. Lane, Seventh District.

Gains by Labor Seen In Maine Election

The AFL's political arm yesterday hailed last Monday's Maine election as "a great victory" for labor.

Joseph D. Keenan, director of Labor's League for Political Education, said this was due to the fact that Maine voters defeated a proposed "little Taft-Hartley Act" by an overwhelming vote.

He said defeat of the Barlow and Tabb bills, representing "the substance of the Taft-Hartley Act," was due to "a long, careful and hard campaign by organized labor of every description" in Maine.

The Tabb bill would have banned the closed shop, the Barlow bill the closed and union shops, secondary boycotts and sympathetic and jurisdictional strikes.

Keenan saw further labor gains in the overwhelmingly Republican triumph in the fact that both the GOP Senator-elect, Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith, and the Governor-elect, Frederick G. Payne, opposed the Barlow-Tabb bills.

"The Maine voters have repudiated the record of the anti-labor Eightieth Congress," the AFL spokesman said. "Now if the next Congress repeals the Taft-Hartley Act it will be doing nothing more radical than what has already been done by New Englands rockbound Maine."

County Cites Negro School Improvement

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Richmond, Sept. 15.—Surry County's School Board today told Federal District Court here that numerous steps have been taken this year to equalize the county's school facilities for white and Negro children.

On the crucial problem of new buildings for Negro children, however, the Surry County report made clear that only preliminary steps have been made toward improvement.

The report was filed to comply with a March 30 order of the Federal District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia. That order, issued by Judge Sterling Hutcheson, found that the Surry County School Board had followed policies of discrimination against Negro children by denying them school facilities equal to those for white children.

The Surry county board told the court today that it has taken these steps since receiving the State survey report:

1. Initiated a $250,000 bond issue to be used for building schools for Negro children. The proposed bond issue is before the Surry County Circuit Court for approval.

2. Discussed with Sussex County school officials the proposal for consolidating high schools of the two counties. Further planning hinges on a State survey of Sussex County schools which has been requested.

3. Preliminary talks have been held with an architect about school plans, but further steps must await the Sussex County school survey.

Arlington to Pay for Negro Students in Manassas School

Arlington's School Board has agreed to pay tuition of all county Negro senior high school students who want to attend the Negro Regional Vocational High School in Manassas.

The move followed this week's attack by Negro leaders on what they claimed were "totally inadequate" facilities at Arlington's only Negro high school, the Hoffman-Boston.

On Monday, nine Negro parents asked, and were denied, permission to enroll their children at Arlington's white Washington-Lee High School. They charged facilities in the Negro and white schools were not equal.

Arlington school officials yesterday said they didn't regard it "economically feasible" to provide Hoffman-Boston's present 33 high school students with "vocational training equipment equal to that at a regional school" such as Manassas.

The tuition payments to the Manassas school will cost $100 per pupil annually. Fairfax, Fauquier and Loudoun Counties already have similar arrangements for Negro students.

The Arlington decision was reached after Mrs. Lucy S. Davis, 2442 S. Lowell st., Arlington, asked for tuition to enable her son, Calvin, to continue his high school studies at the Manassas regional school.

Before school opened this year, the Arlington School Board announced it would stop all tuition payments for Negro students, except for seniors now attending District schools who will need accreditation to go to college. The Hoffman-Boston High School is not accredited.

Attorneys Confer

Spottswood Robinson 3d, Richmond Negro attorney, yesterday discussed "informally" the "equal facilities" cases he and his associates are handling, at a conference here with members of the legal staff of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Robinson, Martin A. Martin and Oliver W. Hill, Richmond law partners, plan contempt of court actions against school officials of King George and Gloucester Counties in Virginia, they have announced.

Texas Nomination Causes Court Suit

Fort Worth, Tex., Sept. 15 (AP).—Former Gov. Coke Stevenson carried his fight for the Democratic United States senatorial nomination to Federal Court today after the State Democratic convention accepted Representative Lyndon Johnson as the nominee.

Clint Small, one of Stevenson's attorneys, said at a news conference today that Federal Judge T. Whitfield Davidson had issued a restraining order to prevent the Texas Secretary of State from certifying Johnson as the nominee.

Johnson led Stevenson by 87 votes in the official count approved last night by the Democratic convention, which earlier had purged itself of delegates who would not pledge loyalty to the Truman-Barkley presidential ticket.

Small told reporters the action was filed by C. C. Renfro, Dallas attorney, under the "recently revived Federal civil rights statute." He said it charges that votes in Precinct 13, Jim Wells County, were added to the totals compiled by the election judge "long after" the polls closed August 28.

Just before midnight, convention officials sent the Johnson certification by registered mail to the Secretary of State at Austin. This, Johnson's attorneys said, was to forestall possible legal action by Stevenson.

It took the Truman forces five hours to beat the stubborn States' Rights minority down and sweep into control with two clear-cut victories on test votes. Then they ejected anti-Truman delegates from four counties. States Rights' sympathizers from five other counties walked out in protest.

Personality Won Johnson Nomination

By Palmer Hoyt
Publisher of the Denver Post

Denver, Colo., Sept. 15.—Senator Ed C. Johnson of Colorado is one of the last of the hardshell, prewar isolationists to survive into the postwar era. In this age he is almost as out of place as a mastodon. But in Tuesday's primary election Colorado Democrats gave him one of the most overwhelming victories of his 26 years in politics.

"Big Ed" carried every one of the State's 63 counties.

Does this prove that Colorado indorses the Johnson record of obstinate foot-dragging against the present bipartisan policies of internationalism?

Some may rush to this conclusion without reckoning the personal and other factors in Johnson's campaign for renomination. There is a significant comparison to make between Big Ed Johnson and his fellow isolationist, the former Senator Burton K. Wheeler, whom Montana repudiated in 1946.

It would be mistaken to judge from Johnson's victory that Colorado is more lastingly isolationist than Montana. For there is one sharp difference between the two men. When Wheeler was thrown aside by Montana Democrats it was not on the isolationist issue alone. More important was the fact that Wheeler had become a stranger to the people of his own State. That certainly is not true of Colorado's Johnson.

A "Personal Politician"

Ed Johnson is what may be termed a "personal politician." He is probably more widely known and more personally popular than any political figure in Colorado history. He works hard at it. There is not a crossroads in the State which has not heard Big Ed's friendly voice and felt the grip of his massive handshake.

It is doubtful that any member of Congress can surpass him in volume of personal correspondence mostly handwritten in his own fine penmanship. "Ig" has worked hard for his constituents. Even those who are alarmed at his stubborn isolationism will give him credit for that. On domestic matters of particular interest to Colorado—farm and labor policy, reclamation and regional development—he is generally regarded as a good servant.

Colorado, basically, is agrarian and conservative in its outlook. It is by inner nature Republican. While its neighbor States of the Rocky Mountain empire for the most part voted for Roosevelt four times running, Colorado went for Willkie in 1940 and for Dewey in 1944.

Johnson Won In 1942

But that did not keep Coloradoans from reelecting Johnson against the strong Republican opposition of former Governor Ralph Carr in 1942. Johnson himself is the explanation for this anomaly. In outlook on domestic issues, he is at least a "bipartisan" and at worst, as viewed by opponents in his own party, he is a "Republican running under the Democratic label." This accounts for Johnson's tremendous personal following in Colorado and for the weakness shown by his primary opponent, Gene Cervi.

The latter, an explosive and brilliant former newspaperman, was, in short "too New Dealish" for Colorado Democrats. The foreign policy record of Ed Johnson was kept constantly to the fore during the primary campaign, not only by his Democratic opponent but by the two contenders for the Republican nomination as well.

In all likelihood, Johnson's isolationism will be the key issue of the general election, since on domestic matters his position is largely indistinguishable from that of his Republican colleagues in the Senate.

But Big Ed's opponents, especially those alarmed at his backward views on national security, recognize they are in for a hard pull. For Colorado, so far, has shown a willingness to forgive him his transgressions.

GOP Congress Won't Curb HCL, Truman Declares

President Truman asserted yesterday that a Republican-controlled Congress will never act to curb high prices and that the only remedy for inflation "lies in electing a Democratic Congress in November."

A GOP-controlled House investigating committee struck back with a promise that it soon will release a "well-documented report" blaming the Truman Administration for forcing up food prices.

Mr. Truman wrote to Mayor Frank H. Eggers of Jersey City and the mayors of 10 other New Jersey towns, who had adopted a joint proclamation urging the President to call another extra session of Congress to act on prices.

Representative August H. Andresen (R., Minn.), chairman of a special House committee investigating speculation in commodity markets, announced meanwhile that an "interim report" on the study would show that "the Truman Administration has completely dominated the market and the price of grains" through large Government purchases of foodstuffs for foreign relief.

Wealthy Importer's Wife Burned to Death

Lake Placid, N. Y., Sept. 15 (AP).—Mrs. Beryl Wolf Schwaback, 57, wife of a wealthy New York City importer, was burned to death at her Moose Island summer camp early today, State police said. Two servants escaped by jumping from a window.

Mrs. Schwaback's body was recovered by troopers hours later from the ruins of her spacious camp Ashenonta. Her husband, Eugene J. Schwaback, 59, was in New York at the time.

Dewey Adds 3 Senate-Race States to Tour

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 15.—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey tonight added three more Senate-race States to a stepped-up Western itinerary in what was described as "the most intensive drive in the modern history of the party."

Montana, where Republicans hope to pick up a Senate Democratic seat, and Idaho and Wyoming were the three. In the last two, Republicans are fighting to hold their Senate lines.

A fourth booking, in Salt Lake City, Utah, backtracking on President Truman's trail, will carry Governor Dewey's "barnstorming" special into 11 States in 11 days.

The added starters were announced by Herbert Brownell, jr., Dewey's campaign manager. After a 10-man, top-level campaign strategy conference in the Governor's office.

Governor Dewey assembled his "brain trust" on foreign and domestic problems and campaign techniques, amid indications that the developing crisis in Berlin may bring some revisions in the Governor's treatment of foreign policy.

Brownell, however, discussed only campaign mechanics and the GOP outlook at a press conference after the meeting.

Predicts "Aggressive" Campaign

Brownell predicted a "constructive, aggressive" campaign that will not only put Dewey in the White House but hold Republican control of the Senate and House.

"The Maine election was not a flash in the pan, but a true barometer," he said.

Disclosing that Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) and other top members of the party will make speeches for Dewey before the campaign is over, he said:

"We have unity, the enthusiasm of the young people with us, and the advice and counsel of every Republican leader from coast to coast."

Here are the added major speeches booked for the Western swing; which really gets under way next Monday in Des Moines, Iowa.

September 28, Spokane, Wash.; September 29, Missoula, Helena and Great Falls, Mont.; September 30, Pocatello, Idaho, and Salt Lake City, and October 1, Cheyenne, Wyo. Rear platform appearances and speeches will be liberally sprinkled at stops in between.

Hope to Defeat Murray

Concentration of three Dewey speeches in Montana underlined Republican hopes of defeating Senator James E. Murray, one of the four Senate Democrats outside the South who are up for reelection.

The Idaho and Wyoming stops are designed to bolster reelection chances of two Republican Senators, Henry C. Dworshak (Idaho) and Edward V. Robertson, Wyo.

Sitting with Governor Dewey in the last big strategy powwow before his 14-car, latest-gadget special pulls out of Albany Sunday night were:

Herbert Brownell, jr., Dewey's campaign manager; Edwin F. Jaeckle, in charge of upstate New York headquarters; J. Russell Sprague, National Committeeman for New York; Elliot V. Bell, New York State Superintendent of Banks and ace strategist; John Foster Dulles, foreign policy adviser aand American representative in the U. N. General Assembly; Roger W. Strauss, close friend and personal adviser; Benjamin Duffy, of the advertising firm of Batton, Barton, Dursine and Osborne; William C. Murphy, Republican National Committee press relations director; Paul Lockwood, secretary to the Governor; and James C. Hagerty, executive assistant.

Foreign Policy Position

No immediate shift in Governor Dewey's campaign treatment of foreign policy was announced, but his position was reliably reported to be this:

1. On the question of basic national unity, he will adhere strictly to the bipartisan stand worked out last week with his foreign policy advisers.

2. But in the wide-open field of Administration conduct of foreign policy, its alleged errors of omission, he feels he has the complete freedom he lacked in the 1944 wartime campaign.

This position is flexible, a close adviser pointed out, and will, of course, be tempered by developments in the European situation. If the international picture reaches anything like a brink-of-war stage, Dewey will pull in, very much as he did in 1944, on some of the points on which he now feels unfettered.

As one strategist described it, the rough-thumb rule on foreign policy will be the same he successfully applied in 1944: "The country's interest will always come first."

Dulles Is Silent

Dulles, who joined with Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg and Governor Dewey in last Friday's bipartisan stand on the Berlin crisis, declined comment after today's strategy board hurdle.

He announced he will see the press at 4 p. m. Friday at the Hotel Roosevelt in New York. Dulles will leave late Friday or early Saturday for the Paris conference of the U. N. General Assembly.

Meanwhile, Dewey scheduled one more huddle Friday on the knotty farm problem with his specialists in Congress, Representative Clifford P. Hope (R., Kans.) and Senator George D. Aiken (R., Vt.).

Earlier, two out-of-State Republicans saw the Governor and held separate conferences.

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R., Mass.), chairman of the House Veterans Committee, voiced "alarm" over the failure to give the Navy a stronger air arm. She said the Governor is "keenly aware" of the need for greater preparedness, especially in the air.

Gov. James C. Shannon of Connecticut, nominated for reelection yesterday, predicted the GOP nominee will carry Connecticut by a "substantial majority" for the first time since 1932. Shannon said his forecast is borne out by polls taken in Bridgeport, Waterbury, New Haven and Hartford. He invited Governor Dewey to speak in Connecticut. Dewey made his usual "if time permits" reservation.

Bishop Looks to New Churches for Unity

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

Church unity may come from the younger churches rather than the old, the Right. Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, said yesterday.

Bishop Dun

Bishop Dun returned from more than two months abroad. He attended the Lambeth Conference of Anglican Bishops in London in July and the first assembly of the World Council of Churches in Amsterdam in August.

In a press conference at the Episcopal Church House, 1702 Rhode Island ave. nw., Bishop Dun said that at Amsterdam and Lambeth evidence of a desire for church unity was particularly strong among the younger churches.

"They are going to get unity whether we like it or not," he said, adding that unity may come "back to us from the fringes rather than from the old centers."

Amsterdam Conference

The most significant thing about the Amsterdam assembly is that it actually happened, the Bishop said. Reports on the great problems of the day issued at the meetings were not as important as the fact that an instrument for continuing study together among the 146 churches has been established, he declared.

Referring to the strong statements condemning communism issued by both meetings, Bishop Dun said there was no doubt at either Lambeth or Amsterdam that explicitly Godless Marxian Communism is "utterly incompatible" with Christian life.

Christians must face the fact he asserted, that too many people struggling upward from subjugation, communism seems to offer more than what they have known He warned that the church can not afford to become solely identified with a single nation.

Lost Leadership

American and British democracy have lost their positions of leadership and "unless we can show more adventurous allegiance to our principles in the way of social justice and equal opportunity, people struggling upward out of bondage will tend to look to other places," he warned.

Both at Lambeth and Amsterdam, churchmen stated, without public dissent, that the church believes all men and women of every race and status stand together before God as objects of His love and forgiveness, Bishop Dun said.

"Anything in the church which obscures that fact, through racial or class segregation, in the long run is contrary to nature and the church itself," the bishop asserted.

Firemen to Select Queen Of Beauty at Rockville Event

Eight contestants are expected to vie for the role of beauty queen at the annual convention of the Montgomery County Firemen's Association to be held Saturday in Rockville.

The one-day convention will begin at 1:30 p. m. with a parade along Montgomery ave. to the carnival grounds.

All of the 14 volunteer fire departments in the county will have units in the parade, and companies from Winchester, Va. and Baltimore will compete for parade prizes. A reviewing stand will be erected on the Montgomery County Courthouse lawn.

The beauty contest will be held at 3 p. m. on the carnival grounds. Judges will be two county trial magistrates, Judge Alger Y. Barbee, of Rockville, and Warren Browning, of Bethesda, and Attorney Ralph G. Shure, of Takoma Park, a former trial magistrate. Names of the girls participating have not been announced.

A dinner will be staged beginning at 7 p. m. followed by election of officers and a business meeting of the association.

Mason May Ask Grants Today For 2 Hospitals

Commissioner Guy Mason may seek approval for grants of Federal funds to Children's and Gallinger Hospitals at a meeting of the District Commissioners today if plans for the grants are completed in time.

Mason indicated he will recommend granting $598,000 for the Children's Hospital building program and earmarking of other funds for erection of a three-story brick pediatrics and crippled children's structure at Gallinger.

The grants would be drawn from the fund made available for District hospital construction through the Hill-Burton Act and must be matched on the basis of $2 for each $1 granted. The Gallinger structure is expected to cost $2,050,000.

Sidewalk Near Silver Spring, Sewer to Be Completed Soon

Two long-sought projects in the Silver Spring area, one a sidewalk and the other a storm sewer to carry off surface water, will be completed soon.

Blanton S. Barnett, Montgomery County engineer, said yesterday final touches were being applied to a 3900-foot temporary sidewalk along the south side of Old Bladensburg rd. at Four Corners.

Built in answer to complaints by parents and civic groups that hundreds of children were exposed to danger, the sidewalk provides safe walking for students of Four Corners Elementary and St. Benedict's Parochial Schools.

Barnett said the 4-foot wide asphalt sidewalk represents an outlay of $2487.

The other project is a storm sewer on Wayne ave., from Dale dr. to Mansfield rd., which was begun Tuesday by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission.

A spokesman for the WSSC said the main line, to run 900 feet, will vary in diameter from 36 inches at the lower end to 42 inches at the upper end. The contract, awarded to Eyre Bros., Inc., of Silver Spring, calls for completion in 60 days.

Residents of the area had complained of flood conditions each time there was a heavy rain and officials said yesterday the new storm sewer will carry off all surface water.

P-TA Frames Four-Point Schools Plan

The Montgomery County Council of Parent-Teacher Association last night announced a four-point program aimed at development of a "constructive community approach to the county's school problems."

The program, to be presented for adoption September 28 at the council's general meeting, calls for:

1. Sponsoring of local community discussion groups by each of the 35 P-TA's in the county "to evaluate the elements' necessary for a satisfactory school system."
2. Radio forums put on by the council, with educators, school patrons and community leaders participating, to define existing problems and obtain suggestions for solving them.
3. Setting up of a panel of "qualified State and National authorities on education" to assist the local discussion groups in reaching solutions to their problems.
4. Handing over to County authorities solutions reached to the problems.

The council, in setting up the program, will seek the assistance of all "County school-minded groups," and their participation in it will be welcomed, according to a council spokesman.

Following outline of the program by Council President Nathan R. Gilbert, the meeting, which was held in Richard Montgomery High School, Rockville, broke up into 11 discussion groups on various phases of P-TA and school relationships. About 250 were present.

Playground Politics

An ugly situation of potential violence is developing as the result of attempts by the Wallace Young Progressives to demonstrate against racial segregation on Washington playgrounds. The danger is not diminished by the tactics employed by District police, but, on the contrary, might be augmented unless those tactics are changed.

It should be obvious to anyone who has followed the Wallace movement that these protests are not calculated to eliminate segregation. There are many grounds for quarreling about the present playground regulations, some of which have been ventilated from time to time in this newspaper. But the efforts of the Young Progressives to thwart the policy by invading white playgrounds with racially mixed groups is both a cruel joke on the dupes who participate and an invitation to trouble. It puts the whole matter on a basis of antagonism and emotion rather than logic. Indeed, it may be suspected that the prime purpose of the protest which backfired last Saturday and the new demonstration scheduled for this Saturday morning is publicity attendant upon a possible fracas with police.

Sensible police direction ought to be concerned with preventing the same kind of martyrdom that Wallace achieved as a result of the unseemly mob conduct in North Carolina. Apparently, however, the lesson has not been learned. Most of the police on the scene at the Rosedale Playground last Saturday were plain-clothes men seemingly more interested in spying on the Wallaceites than in halting any conflict. A gang of young toughs collected, and several of the demonstrators were pelted with missiles with little visible interference from police. If police stick to these gumshoe methods, there is likely to be more trouble at the next demonstration. Instead of plain-clothes men, what is needed is enough men in uniform to put down violence from whatever side. The function of police should be to maintain order irrespective of politics.

Moscow's Miscalculation

The most troublesome factor in the Russo-Western dispute over Berlin is the miscalculations that the Kremlin is obviously laboring under. They are inevitable in any dictatorship, but particularly in the Soviet dictatorship. The Russians' information on what is happening in the outside world is colored by the fact that they are victims of their own propaganda that the capitalist order is bound to collapse. No emissary, indeed, would dare to report events on any other basis; it would be as much as his life was worth if he did. For instance, the progress of the Wallace campaign must take up a goodly part of the material that goes to Moscow from the Soviet officials in America.

Such distortions of what is going on in the world are bound to put a premium on mistakes in Soviet policy. In 1939 the Russians imagined that the Finns were waiting with open arms to welcome the Russian invaders. The reverse was true. The Finns resisted the invaders almost to a man, and Kuusinen's puppet government, which the Soviet army brought with it, was condemned to wait ingloriously outside the border, and eventually had to be disbanded. Since the war, some of the mistakes have been egregious. Certainly, if Molotov had agreed to participate in the Marshall Plan, it is inconceivable that Congress would have voted for it. The Soviet blunder was cumulative. Fearing the reaction in the satellite countries, the Russians began to use the whip, and Tito's reaction introduced a schism in the Communist Party the significance of which cannot be overestimated.

On Berlin, Soviet policy has been completely out of focus. The Russians did not foresee either the Western determination to stay in Berlin or the German support of the Western position. They have stubbed their toes badly in their attempt to dragoon German opinion. Pieck, the leading Communist in Germany, is reported to have said that three weeks of the blockade have undone three years of Communist spadework in Germany. But the biggest blow to the Russians must have been the demonstration of the effectiveness of the airlift—a demonstration which has astounded laymen in other countries as well as the Russians. It must now be clear in Moscow that the policy of sitting out the airlift has a debit as well as a credit side for the Soviet.

Soviet miscalculations, alas, are a prime danger to peace, for they make for irresponsibility. The sneer of the Soviet officer in the city hall that the Westerners are "afraid" may express a conviction of the Politburo. It may be thought in high quarters that intimidation is bound eventually to produce a diplomatic triumph (which the Russians, indeed, are already boasting about) because of the Western world's war-weary desire for peace. Judging from the polls of American opinion, this is a complete miscalculation, yet there appears to be no way of disabusing the Soviet mind of the fixed ideas with which it is cluttered.

Putting On The Heat

Despite the pungent aroma of politics emanating from the interchange of accusations between President Truman and Senator Taft, an important issue is entailed. The controversy arose out of a meeting held on July 28 in Senator Taft's office at which officials of the NLRB general counsel's office were called into conference with representatives of Chicago newspaper publishers and were allegedly pressured to bring a charge of contempt of court against the International Typographical Union—a charge actually brought by the agency about a fortnight later. The President termed the Senator's connection with this matter "entirely improper." And the Senator replied yesterday that "the Truman statement is merely an attempt to curry favor with the labor bosses who control the labor publicity to which he is looking for help in the election."

The account of the meeting given to the President by David P. Findling, NLRB associate general counsel, makes it plain, as indeed does Senator Taft's own statement, that the Senator did talk to the Government officials in the presence of the publishers' representatives and did impress upon them that he considered the typographical union case the most important proceeding that had arisen under the Taft-Hartley Act. In the circumstances, this admonition from the principal author of the act and the chairman of the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare seems very much like what Mr. Truman aptly if inelegantly called it—an "attempt to put the heat on one of the executive departments."

Senator Taft says "It is not only the practice but the duty of every Congressman and Senator when his constituents allege that some executive department is not doing its duty in relationship to matters in which they are interested to take up that matter with the executive department concerned." This is to view the member of Congress as a mere creature of his constituents, a minion obliged to support their claims regardless of merit. Mr. Taft himself is living evidence that a Senator is something much more than this. Surely he must recognize that the support of special claimants before a quasi-judicial agency such as the NLRB poses a serious threat to the impartiality and independence which should characterize the agency's judgments. Legislative intervention in issues before executive departments may be, as Senator Taft says, a common practice; but it is a highly dangerous one, threatening to subvert the separation of powers which lies at the heart of the American system of government.

Productivity

The Americans designated in response to Sir Stafford Cripps' suggestion to sit on the new United States-British Council on Productivity will undertake what is probably the most delicate and perhaps the most important phase of the whole European Recovery Program as applied to Britain. Their job is to supplement material and monetary aid to Britain with a contribution of some of this country's know-how and efficiency to industries which are producing far below their potential because of adherence to antiquated or wasteful production techniques.

The task is delicate because, obviously, it requires a sympathetic understanding of British problems. It is immensely important because increased productivity, or man-hour output, is a prerequisite to the reconstruction and rehabilitation of the British economy. Sir Stafford Cripps put the problem succinctly and in undeniable terms when he addressed the Trade Union Congress at Margate a fortnight ago:

> There is only one way by which we can with a given volume of employment increase our real standard of living and that is by each of us producing more, or in other words putting up our productivity. There is no other answer. The next stage therefore in our progress is to increase the volume of our production and that will also help us to keep down prices, and so increase real wages and markets for our exports. We must get more per man-year per head of the population, and quite a lot more . . . That can be done in only two ways. Either we must use more muscle or more brain and I am in favor of more brain. I would rather see the introduction of new methods and new machinery than longer hours of work.

The plain fact is that with a few exceptions, comparable industries in Britain fall far below those in the United States in terms of productivity. The reasons are manifold. Undoubtedly the magnitude of the American market and its encouragement of mass production is a factor. Perhaps another factor is British adherence to high standards of precision—often needlessly high standards. But there remain remediable waste and inefficiency. Antiquated plants and old-fashioned layout of machines, needlessly time-consuming movements of workers and materials, delays in delivery of essential production items, unnecessarily complicated operations—all these are factors which might be corrected through careful analysis by production experts and expert management. This is the area in which Americans have excelled.

What is called featherbedding in America and operates to retard productivity in certain industries here is endemic in Britain and cripples nearly every industry. Devices adopted by trades unions to protect their members from technological unemployment, outmoded production rituals and wasteful duplication of effort are perhaps the root cause of low productivity in British industry. These are not easily discarded—especially under the aegis of a Labor government. Yet the discarding of them will certainly prove one of the essential keys to solution of Britain's problem.

It is extremely fortunate, therefore, that half of the American representatives on the joint council will be labor leaders—men with a sympathetic awareness of the difficulties entailed. They are men of high caliber who should be able to talk effectively with their opposite numbers in England. The industry members of the American delegation are men who have achieved outstanding success in promoting productivity. On their shoulders will fall the principal responsibility for talking with British industrial leaders in terms that will be helpful but not patronizing, stimulating but not overbearing. Good will on both sides should make the council a potent instrument in the promotion of European recovery.

Right And Might

The first question before the Security Council in the Hyderabad conflict is the issue of whether or not Hyderabad is an independent state, as it asserts, and thus entitled to a voice in the discussion. The government of India holds that Hyderabad is not and never has been independent. According to Delhi, the troubles there are purely "domestic affairs" into which the United Nations cannot legitimately stick its nose.

The issue is full of legal intricacies and technicalities. Much can be said on either side, none of it conclusive. In support of the Nizam's argument is the fact that the British Parliament declared in the act severing the tie with India that British paramountcy was thereby terminated. Prime Minister Attlee followed up with a statement that as far as the British government was concerned, the 562 princely states were free to join either India or Pakistan or to stay out of both if they wished. Hyderabad infers that any state free to make such a choice is ipso facto independent and sovereign.

But what is, or was, "paramountcy"? No one has ever defined it clearly, least of all the British, who made it fit differing circumstances of time and place to suit their imperial interests. And if it be said that the ending of paramountcy means reversion to the status quo ante, that, too, is subject to qualification. For in a sense the British themselves merely assumed the paramountcy over Hyderabad that the Mogul Empire had previously exercised.

Since 1798, before British rule in India, a garrison of the Indian army has been stationed in Hyderabad, and it stayed after the end of British rule. It was there until early this year, when it was withdrawn under the "standstill agreement" between Hyderabad and Delhi. The withdrawal, according to the Indian government, was a gesture of good faith in the Nizam's intentions—since found to have been misplaced. Implicitly, however, it might be said also to constitute a recognition that the presence of Indian troops in Hyderabad was improper while the Nizam, as a free and independent sovereign, was deciding whether or not to join the Indian Dominion.

There is still another argument, again going back to the British regime. The British maintained that they were the "primary power" in India and that, therefore, no other sovereignties could or did exist. Certainly they made plain to the Nizam that despite his "exalted" title he was no different from the other 561 princes, none of whom was sovereign. The Indian government, as the "successor state" recognized by the United Nations, claims to have inherited the status of "primary power" from the British.

If the Hyderabad issue were to be settled according to law—by the International Court of Justice, say—it would appear that the government of India has somewhat the better of the case. There is no question but that it has a very strong case in the economic, linguistic, ethnic and religious ties of the Hindu majority in Hyderabad to the surrounding peoples of India. In these circumstances why did the government of India appeal to force so precipitately?

Ivory Tower

Ever since President Truman unleashed the unfortunate though scarcely original charge of "red herring" to describe the spy investigations, the country has been filled with red herrings flung every which way. As A. J. Leibling observed in The New Yorker, much of the usage has betrayed a profound confusion over what the term actually means. But the damage is done. We are a Nation of cultists, and what the President says is likely to have a much more far-reaching influence than the admonitions of the language teachers. So we have herrings to the right of us and herrings to the left of us. In point of fact, the country seems fated for an inundation of rhetorical abstractions as a result of the President's—or his speech writers'—metaphorical ventures. In an address the other day calculated to arouse the suspicions of editorial writers and the Hod Carriers Union alike, Mr. Truman remarked: "I think that a person who holds public office and who is frankly a politician is just as good a citizen as some of the people who live in their ivory tower and throw bricks at them." Ivory bricks covered with herringbone, no doubt.

HYMN TO MORNING

This is the golden hour,
The shining tide;
This is the budding flower
Opening wide;

God of the Day, beware!
Apply thy touch,
Keep pure the virgin air,
Attend thy watch:

Let not the moon be done
Before the noon,
Nor the bright waning sun
Go down too soon.

Outdated B-36

Marshall Andrews' story of August 30 resulted in some comment that I have been following with a great deal of interest.

I was especially interested in the observations concerning the B-36, since I have noted this mammoth craft in flight over my home. On September 1 and 4 letters were published indicating the combat radius of the B-36 with a full load is about the same as the B-29s that bombed Japan. The letter of September 4 further pointed out that the B-36 is about as fast as the wartime B-24, or about 300 miles per hour. I have read where the B-50 (the latest version of the B-29) does about 400 miles per hour.

A letter in your columns on September 9 clearly illustrated that the B-29 type of airplane is no match for jet fighters.

Since Marshall Andrews said the B-36 is slated to replace the 400 miles per hour B-50, this makes me wonder how the 300 miles per hour B-36 would make out with something like the 670 miles per hour F-86 in opposition.

In short, as a taxpayer I cannot understand why we are spending hundreds of millions for an airplane like the B-36—a craft that appears as dated as horse-drawn artillery.

German Reeducation

I was greatly interested by the story which appeared in the September 12 issue of your paper under the headline "Nazi Leader Scoffs at Idea of Reeducation," (page 2L), but I would like to take exception to the statements attributed to Hans Fritzsche, high official in Dr. Goebbels' propaganda ministry. As former director of the Regensburg reeducation program I can assure you that Fritzsche's views are not shared by the majority of the interned Nazis.

Although not all of them have become good democrats overnight—far from it—very real progress has been made in making them realize the enormity of the crimes committed by Hitler's Germany and in helping them understand some of the basic principles of democracy. I rather suspect that propagandist Fritzsche is attempting to disparage the reeducation program for reasons of his own, which surely have nothing to do with orienting the German people away from Fascist ideologies.

It is true that many persons in Germany have become stronger Nazis than they were two or three years ago, but the answer to that problem is more reeducation and more information, not less. In any case, altogether too little emphasis has been placed on reeducating the German people, and it might perhaps be wise if at least a small part of the Marshall Plan billions were used for that purpose.

I would like to draw your attention to the fact my name was misspelled in your article.

Speaking Out

It has become the fashion to yell "Communist" whenever anyone with a so-called progressive or liberal viewpoint opens his mouth. There are good Americans in this country who believe it is possible to avoid war with Russia, and who even admire the Russian progress. However mistaken they may be, if they are, there still remains their constitutional right to freedom of thought and expression. No one, in this free country, should fear to speak out.

So far as Henry Wallace is concerned, his interest in astrology, boomerang throwing and other unconventional views certainly makes him unusual and, to some, "screwballish." But this fellow has quite an intellectual background and any fair minded person who reads his Whose Constitution? published in 1936, and some of his other writings, will find that many of his statements make sense.

It will be the world's loss and a great pity if we throw overboard reason and allow emotional reactions to stampede us into another war. Unless Russia's leaders are insane, they cannot want another war. Now is the time for statesmanship and American diplomacy to win the fight for peace.

WILLARD MOODY.

Understanding The Atom

It is my opinion that most people don't have the basis to talk about the atom. And the politicians don't say much because they don't understand. They talk about security but they can't comprehend the rest.

Most high school graduates that have had a good course in either chemistry or physics could read the smyth report and get a basis of understanding.

But to do this, they would have to read closely and perhaps study for a change. And too many high schools either cannot or do not teach at the level they should. Due to social promotion or mass education, the students get no basis. That most students in high school could comprehend is shown by the students in California who have recently completed a cyclotron.

Pan American Art

Mr. Anthony Qualia (letter published September 9) neatly sidesteps the issue on the current art exhibit put on by American University at the Pan American Union by asserting it would take months to assemble a "representative" show of local art. The fact remains that the present show is neither representative nor modern.

To hurl the charge of "calendar art" at all those who do not turn out degenerate and incomprehensible daubs is a strange way to defend or discuss so-called "modern" art. With possibly two exceptions, Sarah Baker's still life and Summerford's with a cantaloupe, the present collection is a poor rehash of deliberately "escapist" art turned out in Europe a quarter of a century ago and it will be a sad commentary on Latin American knowledge of art if such tripe is accepted as either new, or modern.

Aside from the fact such painting represents the paranoics in American art—men and women who cannot stand or see the world they live in, hence, with whatever sickness of mind they have, they produce childish doodlings on canvas in an insane attempt to escape the problems of society. In sculpture, we have the degenerate art of Lipschitz and Moore, wherein humanity is reduced to abstract or reptilian forms, not only beyond reality, but beyond the beauty and dignity of human mind and life dedicated to the best purposes of living.

If we must turn back to the past for inspiration we might at least select the inspiration of artists like Monticelli, Ingres, David, Corot, Courbet, Turner, Ryder, Eakins, Homer, Inness, Blakelock, Breughel or Van Gogh. These men were no "calendar artists," yet their art will survive long after extreme forms of modern art have been thrown upon the rubbish heap of history.

"Red Herring"

Albert A. Volk's letter of September 13 defending President Truman's characterization of the Un-American Activities Committee's investigation as a "red herring" is not lacking in piscatorial odor itself. Mr. Polk advocates a lie-detector test for Candidate Thomas E. Dewey. This is his American method of investigating allegedly disloyal Government employes who communicated to Governor Dewey the supersecret information that our Government had cracked the Jap code before Pearl Harbor.

Most thoughtful Americans will label the performance of Chairman Parnell Thomas "Operation Billingsgate." They do not feel that way about the sober and fair approach to the same problem as exemplified by Senator Ferguson.

Back of all of this political bitterness and reprisal the conscientious legislator is seeking an answer to a grave threat to national survival and security: How may a Chief Executive of the opposite political faith be held accountable for bad judgment and spiteful performance short of the impeachable? We must find some way to make a hostile Executive realize that his first duty is to his country and not to his political party.

The Jap-code episode partially symbolizes this problem. Technically speaking those who provided Governor Dewey with this supersecret information were guilty of high treason. Yet the infamy of Pearl Harbor in spite of the plain warnings of the broken code was a damning indictment of President Roosevelt's competency as Commander in Chief.

Another avoidable blunder like that and we perish. It was a terrible choice of evils for those disclosing this supersecret evidence of suicidal incompetence. Did absolute loyalty to the Commander in Chief mean you were duty-bound to suppress supersecret evidence which might disqualify him from succeeding himself? If you suppressed the evidence of incompetency who would be morally responsible for a second Pearl Harbor?

In yielding to the sensible patriotic appeal of General Marshall for inviolate secrecy Governer Dewey conclusively proved his country came first. By the same token Candidate Roosevelt showed he was an impartial practitoner of real politik. His performance at Yalta was not proof to the contrary.

There must be some method short of impeachment of making a Chief Executive unselfishly dutiful to the general welfare. There should have been some way of making Woodrow Wilson resign when afflicted with chronic serious illness. There should have been some way of preventing a tired, ill President from making the unfortunate mistakes of Yalta. And there must be a way of making Mr. Truman politically accountable for placing those whose loyalty gravely was suspect in sensitive positions of power and policy.

The affair is a "red herring" but it came from Candidate Truman's exclusive political fishing reserve.

Peril For Science

"WE CANNOT drive scientists into our laboratories; but, if we tolerate reckless or unfair attacks, we can certainly drive them out."

The profound truth of those words spoken by President Truman should be pondered by every American. The President was addressing the centennial meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in Washington.

His words go to the root of the matter in this moment of tragic uncertainty. In the immediate past is repeated proof of the truth of his statement. In Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy the scientists were literally driven out of their laboratories.

Many of them sought refuge in this country. It was the knowledge of Albert Einstein, Enrico Fermi, Lise Meitner, Niels Bohr that helped make possible the discovery of atomic fission.

Germany's scientists were herded into what amounted to concentration camps, watched over by gauleiters. It is hardly surprising that German research on the atom did not progress much beyond the theoretical stage.

The wonder is that German science contributed as much as it did to the German war effort. But the base of German science goes a long way back into the past. It goes back to the great tradition of the German Universities, when scholars from all over the world went to Heidelberg and Bonn. You do not destroy that kind of foundation overnight.

THE IMPORTANT fact for us, however, is that it can be destroyed. The Nazis, once they had come to power, showed how quickly you could squeeze the life out of a free institution. They succeeded in driving the free spirit of inquiry out of the lecture hall and the free spirit of research out of the laboratory.

The question today is whether scientists in this country do feel intimidated and encroached upon. Do they feel that they cannot work for the Government without subjecting themselves to suspicion and humiliation? This is no academic question, since the Government, through the Atomic Energy Commission and a half dozen other agencies, is supervising research vital to future security.

It seems to me that evidence is growing to show the answer to the question must be yes. The latest piece of evidence is the telegram from which the President quoted in his speech to the scientists. It was signed by eight distinguished men of science, none of them among those publicly harried by the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Heading the list of signers was Karl T. Compton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Another signer was Philip Morse, a distinguished atomic physicist.

UNTIL recently Morse was director of the laboratory on Long Island operated by the Atomic Energy Commission. He resigned, stating publicly that the chief reason was that he could not work or get other scientists to work in an atmosphere of smear and suspicion. Morse has gone back to his professorship at M. I. T. convinced that the atomic energy project is definitely being retarded by current attacks on scientists.

The trouble, it seems to me, goes back to the attitude too common when the Army ran the Manhattan Project during the war. Scientists got the feeling then, and with reason, that they were looked upon as long-haired eccentrics who had to be closely watched lest they give away vital secrets. This was a funny business, so the attitude went, and too bad you had to bother with queer people like scientists.

Some scientists may be more temperamental than ordinary people. But to regard them as long-haired eccentrics, subject to constant surveillance, is to take an attitude that can properly be called Fascist.

Scientists do not want to be singled out for special treatment. They do not want either to be put on a pedestal or to be considered a separate and dangerous class. They share the feelings of ordinary human beings and some among them, as the Canadian espionage inquiry showed, fell for communism and the enticement of the Communist conspiracy.

The House Un-American Activities Committee is building up to a public atomic spy inquiry. If that inquiry sideswipes all scientists and science, further harm will be done. After all, only scientists can conduct scientific research.

"Eduard Benes"

A Communication

YOUR editorials, commenting on the role Eduard Benes played in recent world history, were written obviously in pity, tempered with humility and kindliness, qualities which are conspicuous only by their absence in the memoirs of the late President of Czechoslovakia. He displayed neither pity nor understanding in his recently published memoirs for the late President Emil Hacha, whose unhappy lot was to work with Hitler's Germany after 1938 when Benes went into voluntary exile shortly after the Munich settlement.

Eduard Benes' harsh words for Hacha's collaboration with Hitler may yet cause Czech historians to judge Benes with much more severity than there is in evidence now either in his unhappy country or among his contemporaries all over the world to whom he seemed to be so superior in wisdom, and always so sure to have the solution of every problem, if only his advice were followed.

The Washington Post editorials considered the role Benes played in world affairs in the last 30 years. His role started with the pamphlet published in France in 1917 Detruisez l'Autriche Hongrie, a passionate plea for the destruction of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy. Having achieved that goal, he created the so-called Little Entente, an alliance of Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Romania, which broke down dismally as soon as the partners of the Czechs refused to stand up against Hitler's Germany. Benes also opposed the Tardieu plan for a confederation of the small Danubian states, because he feared the return of the Hapsburgs more than the might of Hitler.

His opposition to the Tardieu plan was typical of the foreign policy of Benes, which was a narrow, nationalist policy to place seven million Czechs in a dominant position among the 50 million people of the Danube Valley. This policy was based on the assumption that all he needed to do was to keep the Austrians, Hungarians and last but not least the Slovaks in check hoping that Hitler's Germany would be "contained" by others the same mistake he made about Soviet Russia, only 10 years later.

IT IS NOT the purpose of this communication to point out all the inconsistencies of the Benes memoirs, or the contradictions all too often apparent in his statements or promises. These have been abundantly referred to recently by such seasoned foreign correspondents as Anne O'Hare McCormick, C. L. Sulzberger, and Albion Ross in the columns of the New York Times, and doubtless there will be additional revelations as to how such patriotic Slovak leaders as Professor Osusky, and the late Prime Minister, Dr. Milan Hodza, found it impossible to go along with Benes' pro-Soviet policy in 1939, when Stalin was Hitler's ally. Not even this alliance prevented Benes from telling Soviet Ambassador Maisky: "It is necessary for the future that you must continue to be a neighbor of ours and of Hungary."

This is a direct quotation from the Benes memoirs relating to his conversation with Maisky, which took place on September 19, 1939, at a time when the Soviet army was marching into Poland. That Poland was Britain's ally whose hospitality then Benes enjoyed as a victim of Hitler, then Stalin's ally, that did not embarrass Benes in boasting, "This whole dynamic phase of Soviet policy left me reassured, although in tense expectation." Reassured of what!?

TO VIEW this, in proper historical perspective, it is not without interest to recall that while Benes conversed with Maisky in London, the Kremlin refused diplomatic recognition to Czechoslovakia, though it kept on ice in Moscow the notorious Fierlinger "just in case." But in 1939, like Hitler, Stalin recognized Slovakia and the diplomatic representative of Hitler's protectorate was no other than the brother of Joseph Tiso, the first President of the Slovak Republic to whom Benes refused mercy, allowing him to be executed in 1947 as a war criminal. That didn't make him popular with the Slovaks who always regarded Tiso as a successor of their beloved leader, Father Hlinka, whereas Benes was to them the representative of Czech oppression.

It would be interesting to hear the comments of the former Polish Ambassador, Mr. Ciechanowsky, a close friend of the late General Sikorsky, with whom Benes negotiated for a "Czechoslovak-Polish Federation" in 1940-1941, if Benes ever disclosed to the Poles that in September 1939 he agreed with Maisky on the necessity of common frontier with Russia, at Poland's expense. Professor Osusky's comments would be also worth while to learn—how he felt when Benes agreed on the cessation of Ruthenia to the Soviet, thus allowing the Russians to get a foothold inside the Carpathian Basin, which statesmen of the caliber of Talleyrand and Castleraegh sought to prevent in the interest of Christian civilization and western European hegemony.

It is this fatal and opportunistic policy of Benes which brought down the iron curtain on the 50 million people of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy. Benes' hate of the Hungarians—who did not want the Russians inside the Carpathians, as they remembered how the Czar's army helped to quell Hungary's struggle for independence from the Hapsburgs in 1848, and who did not care either for the Russian kind of popular democracy, having tasted it in 1919 during Bela Kun's short-lived Bolshevish—boomeranged in February, 1948, when Benes lived to see how his Soviet friends interpreted the eastern Slavic kind of democracy in his Czechoslovakia.

NOTHING could demonstrate more the opportunistic foreign policy of Eduard Benes than his plea to the Paris Peace Conference in 1919 to have Ruthenia annexed to Czechoslovakia, in order to "contain" the spread of bolshevism in Europe. Having succeeded in convincing the great powers assembled in Paris that the annexation of Ruthenia would "contain" the spread of bolshevism, what did he do in 1920 when Warsaw was threatened by Trotzky's Red army? He refused to help General Weygand to whom he owed so much. And not content with refusing to help the Poles, he also refused entry to Hungarian troops to go to help Poland against the Bolshevik onslaught.

All this points to the sad truth that notwithstanding his keen intellect, and alertness, Benes lacked vision and had no sense of proportion. Instead of being content playing ball as equal with his neighbors among whom he could have been easily the leader because of his undoubted talents as a skillful negotiator, he voluntarily became the agent and the spearhead of the Soviet imperialism in the heart of Europe, conveniently ignoring that in 1919 he played the game of the French militarist and professed to be an anti-Bolshevik, taking credit for the anti-Bolshevik actions of the Czech legionnaires in Siberia.

THE RULERS of the Kremlin in Moscow have good memories. They remembered in 1945 and again in February, 1948, that Benes sought out their cooperation in 1939 and negotiated treaties with the Soviets in 1941 and in 1943 at the expense of his neighbors to further his own designs. Since those designs coincided with the Soviet expansionist policy to the west, Benes got from Stalin what the Western powers could not and would not give him, because Churchill and Eden did not lead the fight against Hitler's bid for world mastery only to gamble away the heritage of Castlereagh and Wellington for Soviet Russian hegemony in Europe's heartland.

THE POST editorial's conclusion is right, that the Czechs would do well to heed the leadership of their great leader Palacky who said a hundred years ago that for the welfare of the Danubian peoples the Austrian Empire would have to be invented if it had not existed. It is right because neither the Czechs, nor the Poles, the Slovaks, the Hungarians, the Serbs, the Croats nor the Romanians can stand up against the might of the Germans and the Russians.

The failure of Benes' foreign policy in the past 30 years is due precisely to his complete disregard of the counsels of moderation of that great Czech patriot Palacky, whose foresight and humility could so abundantly be found among the fine characteristics of the millions of thrifty, industrious liberty-loving Czech people but were unfortunately absent from Eduard Benes so that his failure became not only a national tragedy for the Czechs but for all the 50 million peoples of the Austro-Hungarian Empire whom Benes helped so much to destroy.

Off The Record — By Ed Reed

"Boy, are you lucky!"

Truman Blast Was a Bid For Labor Favor, Taft Says

which he is looking for help in the election. It is significant that although Mr. Findling's letter was written to him on August 19, it was not released by him until after William Green had called on him and the AFL had announced that it was raising a million dollars to defeat Senators and Congressmen who voted for the Taft-Hartley law.

"The incident should only be a matter of concern to the public because it indicates that if Mr. Truman should be reelected, the executive departments will be dominated by labor unions, and anyone who urges action of any kind against a labor union, no matter what it does, will be publicly attacked by the President.

"In this particular case, Congress created a special committee to follow the enforcement of the Taft-Hartley Law and concern itself with the manner in which it is enforced. That committee called the meeting in question at my request as a member of the committee. But as a matter of fact, it is the duty of every Congressman and Senator to inquire whether the executive departments are doing their duty, and we have the power to impeach any executive officer who fails to do his duty.

"The President's action is in line with his refusal to permit any investigation by Congress of his files relating to the loyalty of Communist sympathizers. He doesn't want the people or their representatives to have anything to say about, or even to know, what the executive is doing in secret. In this particular case, I made no charge that the National Labor Relations Board had neglected its duty and only urged prompt action if they thought there was a proper case on the facts.

"When I returned to Washington for the special session, I was appealed to by the newspaper publishers, including one of my most distinguished constituents, Mr. John S. Knight, publisher of the Akron Beacon Journal, to arrange a meeting for them with Mr. Denham in order that they might present the facts and urge upon him prompt action to enforce the injunction already issued at his request against the ITU by the United States District Court in Indianapolis.

"They told me that in their opinion there was clear evidence of violation of this injunction but that no action had yet been taken by the National Labor Relations Board to enforce it by contempt proceedings. I took the matter up with the special committee created by the Taft-Hartley Law, and asked Mr. Tom Shroyer, the chief counsel of that committee, to arrange the meeting and stated that I would accompany the publishers to the meeting which is the usual practice.

"I found that Mr. Denham was away because of illness, but Mr. Shroyer arranged for the meeting with Mr. Johns and Mr. Findling in charge of the case. Because there was a conference of Republican Senators that morning scheduled to last most of the day, I asked that the meeting be in my office.

"I was able to leave the Republican conference only for 10 minutes, but I understand the publishers presented the facts upon which they claimed there had been a violation of the injunction and urged prompt action. During the 10 minutes I was present at the meeting, I made a general statement relating to the importance of prompt action in cases of this kind if the prosecuting division of the board found that the facts justified it.

"I urged that there be no delay simply because of Mr. Denham's absence, which might be prolonged because of his illness. I did not purport to pass on the facts of the case, except to say that the publishers seemed to me to have made out a prima facie case.

"Of course, I have a special interest in the enforcement of the National Labor Relations Act, as chairman of the Labor Committee and as a member of the special committee to study the enforcement of the act. Congress refused to give any employer or labor union the right to take direct action against unfair labor practices. All such action must be taken through the National Labor Relations Board.

"The success of the act and its enforcement, therefore, depends upon the wise, effective and prompt action of the prosecuting division of the board, whether it be against employer or labor union. It is contemplated and is entirely proper that the party who is injured by the unfair practice should go to the prosecuting division headed by Mr. Denham, give the facts at his disposal and ask for action. Failure to take such action, if justified by such facts, would be a misfeasance on the part of the board and might lead to a complete nullification of the act.

Cites Denham's Fairness

"I stated that I had no direct knowledge of the facts, but urged upon the board careful consideration of the facts presented by the publishers and prompt action if justified in such facts. The board apparently found that the facts justified an application for contempt proceedings, because they have filed such proceedings before the United States District Court.

May I say that I have the greatest confidence in the fairness and good judgment of Mr. Denham, who heads the enforcement division. I may point out that this division is entirely separated from the judicial section of the board, which, subject to court review, passes on the question whether the act is being violated.

"The President in his letter says that he does not expect to interfere in the internal affairs of the National Labor Relations Board. If he finds that any branch of the executive department is failing to do its statutory or constitutional duty, it is not only his right but his duty to call them to task or such failure.

"The truth is that President Truman, by the veto message accepted so largely from the Communist sympathizer Lee Pressley, and by other public statements, has encouraged the open defiance of the law now engaged in by some of the more radical labor bosses."

brought immediate response from the industry. John Holmes, president of Swift, retorted that the suit was filed for political purposes in an "attempt to shift responsibility for high prices." He declared that Swift had not violated any law.

George A. Eastwood, board chairman of Armour, said his company's meat profit last year was only one fifth of a cent a pound. That, he said, is too small to be "responsible for the increase that has taken place in meat prices." He denied that Armour has conspired to divide livestock supplies or to fix prices.

The Justice Department's suit charged that the four companies have conspired to suppress competition in the meat industry in the sale of meat and meat products, by:

1. Controlling the supply of meat which each company obtains for sale, by controlling the amount of livestock each will buy.
2. Using uniform cost formulas for determining selling prices.
3. Selling at "loading" instead of "delivered" weights.
4. Fixing sale prices at "substantially" the same figures.

In a 32-page petition the Government asked that the "monopolizing combination in restraint of trade" be declared a violation of the Sherman antitrust law. It also asked an injunction to restrain the companies from deciding among themselves the amount of livestock each will buy each week, and from each buying a certain percentage.

Herbert A. Bergson, Assistant Attorney General, said there hadn't been effective competition between the four companies since 1893. The alleged combination, it was charged, had resulted in the following.

1. Competition in the purchase of livestock had been restrained.
2. Prices paid to livestock producers at direct buying points have been reduced to a level "lower than it would have been under conditions of free competition."
3. Defendants have been able to charge wholesale prices for meat under monopoly conditions.
4. Prices to consumers have been increased.

The American Meat Institute said charges that any group of companies in the meat packing business can suppress competition is "just plain nonsense."

"As everybody knows, thousands of commercial meat packing companies daily are in stiff competition with each other all over the country, both in selling meat and buying livestock."

It added that several of its members canvassed on the Government action expressed the belief that "political motives" were behind it.

Clark charged that the four firms slaughter 58 per cent of all cattle, 54 per cent of all hogs, 68 per cent of all calves, and 79 per cent of all sheep in the country.

Phone Unions Confer With Employers

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—Two telephone unions met with employers today but one apparently still was prepared to strike Friday.

The union that has threatened the strike, the CIO Association of Communication Equipment Workers, resumed talks with the Western Electric Co. The talks previously were held in Chicago.

Meanwhile, the American Union of Telephone Workers, also a CIO affiliate, resumed talks with the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s long lines department.

The ACEW, whose 25,000 members install and maintain central-office telephone equipment in 43 States and the District of Columbia, talked tonight with company officials and a Federal mediator.

The union is reported to be asking wage increases ranging from 11 to 16 cents an hour, reducing its original 31-cent across-the-board demand. Pay now averages $1.15 an hour. The company's latest offer was to increase wages from 8 to 14 cents an hour.

The long lines telephone workers' meeting today was under a wage-reopening clause in an agreement reached in June without a wage increase.

A. T. & T. said after the session it would submit a wage offer to the union at another meeting Tuesday.

The AUTW represents 25,000 workers in 42 States and the District of Columbia. It originally asked a 30-cent increase over hourly wages which, the union said, now average $1.21 an hour.

may be sent home again if the coal isn't all out.

A crew of eight or nine men worked in 15-minute shifts yesterday, laboriously shoveling the coal onto wheelbarrows and pushing it outside the building.

As they worked, a fan blew fresh air through the bin and firemen played a steady stream of water on the coal bin.

Smoke increased and a sulphur-like smell was noticeable as the top layers of coal came off, but no flames were seen.

No students were reported ill as a result of the fumes, Rice said, and no workmen were affected yesterday.

Cause of the fire was unknown, but Leonard told school officials spontaneous combustion was not uncommon in large coal piles, but that it was very unusual for it to happen in so small a pile. Rice said he could not remember it happening before in any of the county schools.

Rice said the coal will stay outside this winter and be carried from there to the furnace.

A. I. B. to Press Training Aims; Need Stressed

By S. Oliver Goodman

An "alarming shortage" of trained men and women has developed in the banking industry during the past seven years, according to Hartwell F. Taylor, national vice president of the American Institute of Banking.

Taylor

Taylor, addressing the fall educational meeting of the Washington Chapter last night in the Mayflower, added that competition has already developed among banks for the services of trained employes.

As a result the A. I. B. is pressing its educational program for the coming year, he said, with the hope of increasing last year's enrollment of 47,000 to 60,000 this year.

Local A. I. B. classes will start October 4, according to Stephen O. Porter, chairman of the local educational committee, who presided at the meeting.

Prizes for scholarships in the past season's courses were awarded to William H. Smith, Alfred Le Sage, Earl W. Leach and Donald Rozzell.

Standard and prestandard certificates were given to Taylor Burke, jr., Burke & Herbert Bank & Trust Co.; D. H. Quackenbush, Arlington Trust Co.; Earl W. Leach and N. E. Le Rou, American Security & Trust Co.; C. M. Taylor, City Bank; A. L. Sheldahl, Hamilton National Bank; W. E. Williams, McLachlen Banking Corp.; J. Henry Wallace, Old Dominion Bank; Harry Collogne, Hugh Darling, Alfred Le Sage, Roy N. Bowers, Donald E. Tillson, Jay M. Totten, jr., and William H. Smith, Riggs National Bank; Donald E. Rozzell, Security Savings & Commercial Bank.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: F. F. Jasperson has been appointed Washington branch manager of the Graybar Electric Co., Inc.

Harlow H. Curtice, general manager of the Buick division, has been elevated to executive vice president of General Motors. Ivan L. Wiles, Buick comptroller, will succeed Curtice as general manager. John E. Johnson has been appointed truck sales manager of GMC Truck and Coach Division of GM . . . R. Roy Dunn of Potomac Electric Power Co. and H. Randolph Maddox of Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. will be among speakers at the fall conference of the Maryland Utilities Association, starting September 17 at Virginia Beach.

PLAN IS OUTLINED: The "Multiple Management" plan of labor relations was outlined last night at a meeting of the Washington Chapter, National Association of Cost Accountants, in the Lafayette Hotel. As explained by J. F. Welsh, secretary of McCormick & Co. of Baltimore, the plan permits employe participation in running the company. Junior boards are selected from the ranks of personnel and their suggestions are carefully heeded by the senior directorate. Paul Inler was technical chairman at the session, which was attended by more than 70 local accountants.

ODD LOTS: Price cuts in cranberries ranging from 44 per cent down to 15 per cent were announced yesterday by the cooperative which produces about half the Nation's crop . . . Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food index rose to $6.95 on September 14, compared with $6.86 a week earlier and $7.12 a year ago . . . The G. C. Murphy Co. will receive a bronze trophy for having the best 1947 annual report in the variety merchandising industry . . . A secondary distribution of 98,500 shares of F. W. Woolworth stock at 44⅞ was oversubscribed within a short period after the close of the market yesterday . . . The California refinery strike was reflected in a slump of 185,400 barrels in last week's crude oil production figures.

HOTEL PROFITS: Increases in room rates and restaurant prices brought no increase in the hotel industry's 1947 profits, according to a report issued by Horwath & Horwath, hotel accountants. The industry's fair return on the value of its property, it was found, moved but fractionally from 7.38 per cent in 1946 to 7.70 per cent in 1947 after Federal income taxes and from 10.03 per cent to 10.11 per cent before their deduction. Even with the relatively good profits of the past few years, the annual net earnings of hotels after taxes average only 4.53 per cent for the years since and including 1936, the first post-depression year, to show return on capital.

CHAIRMEN NAMED: Ernest R. Wilson, chairman of the auditors section of the District Bankers Association, yesterday announced committee heads as follows:

Program, Fulton H. Dixon, Security Savings & Commercial Bank; House, Tudor Whiton, Second National Bank; Budget, John R. Locker, Riggs National Bank; Publicity, Eugene Rogers Quinn, Washington Loan & Trust Co.; Audit, Allen H. Cannon, Anacostia National Bank; Membership, Lewis E. Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 15 (AP).—A 6-cent break in September corn and a 5-cent drop in soybeans featured dealings on the Board of Trade today. Otherwise, grains did not do much, though lard followed a lower trend in all fats and oils markets.

The drop in September corn was caused in part by switching from this delivery to December, cash houses selling the former and buying the latter. Cash corn fell 3 to 4 cents and purchases from the country on a to-arrive basis were large at 173,000 bushels.

Wheat closed ⅛ to ⅛ higher, September, 2.24½. September corn ended 6 to 6⅛ cents lower at 1.67½@1.67¾, while deferred futures were unchanged to ⅛ lower. Oats closed unchanged to ⅜ higher, September, 72⅛@72¾, and soybeans, 5 to 5½ lower, November, 2.50.

Truman Gets Textile Union Indorsement

New York, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—The Textile Workers Union of America, CIO, which has some 450,000 members, today indorsed President Truman for reelection.

Union President Emil Rieve said the TWUA international executive council had unanimously indorsed Truman "in recognition of the new liberal spirit infused into the Democratic Party during the course of its convention."

President's Itinerary Covers 'Border States'

President Truman will travel the "border State" circuit on the return swing of his Western campaign trip starting this Friday, the White House said yesterday.

Returning by way of Arizona and New Mexico, the President will make two stops and a major speech in Texas. Then he will swing around the Deep South through Oklahoma and his home State of Missouri, and cross lower Illinois, Kentucky and West Virginia.

In addition to dozens of platform appearances, Mr. Truman will make additional major speeches at Oklahoma City, Okla., Louisville, Ky., and Charleston, W. Va.

During his visit to Texas, Mr. Truman probably will meet with former Vice President John Nance Garner at his home in Uvalde, and House Democratic Leader Sam Rayburn at Bonham.

Yesterday's announcement confirmed most of the previously announced schedule for the first half of the President's Western trip.

Leaving Washington at 10:05 a.m. EST, Friday, Mr. Truman will go through Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois and Iowa, making his first big speech at the National Plowing Match near Dexter, Iowa, Saturday at 12:05 p.m., CST.

After a Sunday stop at his home in Independence, Mo., Mr. Truman will go to Denver, Colo., where on September 20 he will make a speech from the capitol steps.

The itinerary then will include Salt Lake City, Utah, Oakland, Calif., a speech from the steps of the San Francisco City Hall and the other in Lakeside Park, Oakland; Los Angeles for a major speech September 23.

The new itinerary from Los Angeles to Washington includes:

September 24—San Diego, Calif., and Phoenix, Ariz.

September 25—Deming, N. Mex.; El Paso, Sierra Blanca, Valentine, Marfa, Alpine and Sanderson, Tex.

September 26—Uvalde and San Antonio, Tex.

September 27—Austin, Temple, Waco, Fort Worth, Dallas and Bonham, Tex.

September 28—Dennison and Gainesville, Tex.; Marietta, Ardmore, Davis, Paul's Valley, Purcell, Norman and Oklahoma City, Okla.

September 29—Shawnee, Seminole, Wewoka, Holdingville, MacAllister, Muskogee, Tulsa, Claremore, Bonita and Afton, Okla., and Neosha, Monette, Springfield, Newburg and Cuba, Mo.

September 30—St. Louis, Mo., and Mount Vernon, Carmi and Evansville, Ill., and Henderson, Owensboro, Irvington and Louisville, Ky.

October 1—Anchorage, Shelbyville, Frankfort, Midway, Lexington, Winchester, Mount Sterling, Preston, Morehead, Olive Hill, Ashland and Catlettsburg, Ky., and Huntington, Charleston, Montgomery and Hinton, W. Va.

October 2—Arrive in Washington.

Truman Gets Backing Of Tennessee Group

Nashville, Sept. 15 (AP).—A new Tennessee Democratic executive committee today indorsed Harry S. Truman for President, then moved to strike the names of three anti-Truman electors from the ballot.

The move to purge the electors who have said they will vote for J. Strom Thurmond of the States' Rights Democrats was made in adoption of a resolution pressed by forces of Gordon Browning, the party's nominee for Governor.

Union Official Defies Probers, Won't Tell Whether He's a Red

SAM BURT
He wouldn't answer

when the question of his political beliefs was raised. When he refused to answer, he was asked to leave the stand.

The subcommittee then called Nathan Klein of New York. He said he was a member of the union and that pressure had been brought on him to contribute to certain causes.

Klein said his union shop chairman took away his union work book because he refused to contribute a half-day's salary to the United Jewish Appeal "and other institutions."

He described himself as a right winger in the union and said he was sure that "eventually they'll take revenge on me for coming here."

Object to Half-day's Levy

Benjamin Baraz of Brooklyn, another union member, said he, too, had objected to the half-day's wage "tax."

Under questioning, he disclosed that he was a member of the Communist Party between 1923 and 1929. During those years, he said, he knew at least four of the present union officers as Communists. He said Gold was one of them and that the others were Joseph Winogradsky, Jack Schneider and Irving Potash.

Burt had denied that any union member was forced to pay tribute to any cause.

He said the fur manufacturers were responsible for introducing violence to the industry by hiring gunmen as strike breakers. He said the union leaders exposed the racketeers and put a stop to all "strong-arm" tactics in the trade.

He denied there were any "outside influences" controlling the union, asserting that its destinies "are controlled by the duly-elected leaders."

"You, therefore, would not owe allegiance to the central committee of the Communist Party?" asked John Graham, subcommittee investigator."

"Certainly not," Burt replied.

Takoma Budget Policy Urged

The Takoma Park (Md.) Community League urged adherence to major items of the city budget last night at a meeting in the Municipal Building at No. 8 Columbia ave.

The league called upon the mayor and city council to hold open meetings and give information to local newspapers if budget deviations are found necessary.

The first action was aimed at the council's recent award of $9000 to the Department of Public Works in place of the $7000 originally earmarked in the budget.

In a second resolution, the league called on the council to adopt a "modern" policy of press relations. It requested a press release date for news geared to publication deadlines of local weekly newspapers and urged that news reporters be informed of actions taken at executive sessions.

One on the Aisle—

Victorians Were Genteel Killers

By Richard L. Coe

THE GENTLE ART OF MURDER is to the fore in the week's top new films. "So Evil My Love" opens this morning at the Capitol and "Rope" arrives at the Warner. Both concern the finer aspects of death-dealing.

This morning we'll consider the Capitol's "So Evil My Love," and a neatly done Victorian yarn this one is. The script writers have done a meticulous job with this leisurely story by Joseph Shearing, Ann Todd and Ray Milland head an excellent company, and there's a fascinating musical score by William Allwyn which you can't help noticing.

The gradual disintegration of a missionary's widow is the subject. We first see Ann Todd on a steamer in the 1860s, returning from the West Indies to England. She is called on to nurse a fevered passenger, played by Milland, a pleasant chap who gets just enough information from her to pop up at the middle-class home in London, her husband's sole legacy.

Gradually he wins her confidence, a simple trick for a man skilled in stealing paintings and avoiding a murder rap. He follows up each stray thread of what she tells him and soon she's involved in blackmailing her sole remaining friend of school days. This leads her to the knowledge of her paramour's past, the murder of the friend's husband and the likely conviction of the friend for her husband's murder. Nor does the churchly widow stop at just one murder.

"SO EVIL MY LOVE." Paramount release, produced in England by Hal B. Wallis. Screen play by Leonard Spigelgass and Ronald Miller from the novel by Joseph Shearing. Photographed by Max Greene. Music by William Allwyn. Additional music by Victor Young. Directed by Lewis Allen. At the Capitol.

THE CAST

Olivia Harwood ..... Ann Todd
Mark Bellis ..... Ray Milland
Susan Courtney ... Geraldine Fitzgerald
Kitty Feathers ..... Moira Lister
Mrs. Courtney ..... Martita Hunt
Henry Courtney .... Raymond Huntley
Jarvis ..... Leo G. Carroll
Sir John Carle ..... Roderick Lovell
Dr. Krylie ..... Finlay Currie

Add Todd Scores

All this is accomplished with that leisured politesse in which our forefathers were so steeped. Soft voices, shaded glances cover the most shattering passions. An embittered husband whose yearning for an heir proves futile; a stiff-necked mother-in-law who considers missionaries beneath her son's estate, and a neglected wife who takes to drink, are law-abiding subjects of Queen Victoria whose fates are wrecked by the widow's fall from grace.

This swift descent to hell is most eloquently etched by the lovely Miss Todd. Her pitiable estate as a respectable widow slips gradually away as the arms of the handsome adventurer enfold her. Her spirited personality, long inhibited by her Christian service, awakens to his poisoned touch with a clarity of reason which even the proprieties of the Johnston office cannot disguise. It is a well-played role and a meatier opportunity than the one Joan Fontaine faced in the rather similar "Ivy."

Music Background Exceptional

Milland's heel is just as you know he would be, urbane, smooth, charming, and Geraldine Fitzgerald makes one of her few screen appearances as the deceived friend. Leo G. Carroll, Finlay Currie and Martita Hunt are some of the others in the smooth cast.

Certainly up there with the screen play by Leonard Spigelgass and Ronald Miller is the immensely effective score of William Allwyn. It's a dry, stringent thing, far above the ordinary background music, with a neatly recurring theme whenever the lovers meet. If you're interested in music, Allwyn's score alone makes "So Evil My Love" an adventure.

The film, by the way, was produced in England by Hollywood's Hal B. Wallis for Paramount release, and the combination of talents has its interests.

Headlining the Capitol's new bill is that Bach-Beethoven-Brahms and Bing of the banjo, Eddie Peabody. Eddie's merciless strumming changes not with the years, which is, to be sure, exactly what we fans of his like best. Ada Lynne, probably vaudeville's tiniest comedienne, and Rochelle and Beebe take care of the laughs, and for novelty there are two people who make a living out of a mighty strange occupation, baton-twirling, Ted and Flo Vallett.

THE DUPONT yesterday dipped back to what 1937 called one of its finest, Pearl Buck's "The Good Earth" . . . Paul Muni and Luise Rainer made this one under the direction of Sidney Franklin . . . "Escape," the John Galsworthy film costarring Rex Harrison and Peggy Cummins, entered its second week at the Playhouse . . . "Nais" probably will be bowing out of the Hippodrome Friday to make way, next day, for a revival of "The Mikado," which probably is as close as the D'Oyly Carte people will be getting on their Nation-wide tour this season to this theaterless town.

Moral Is Made Clear Enough

Newsreel Biography of Hitler Could Stand a New Soundtrack

REMEMBER those pictures taken by Eva Braun of the private hours of Corporal Hitler which were part of our war booty? They've wound up in a collection of Hitlerian newsreels at the Pix under the title, "Will It Happen Again?"

The film is being sponsored by the Navy Club of the United States and has been put together, with the Government's permission, by a group that calls itself "Film Classics."

Retracing the rise of Hitler at this stage remains a sickening process—the attacks on the Jews, the burning of the books, the re-occupation of the Rhineland, the masking of the army as brigades of workers and the faces of the inner Nazi clique.

These shots from the German vaults are interposed with the home movies of energetic Eva, who is generally seen in bathing suits. The few shots of the two together are interesting, of course, but the running commentary, that applies descriptions which don't fit the pictures, is foolish indeed.

You get, for instance, some shots of Hitler with his police dog. These have been interposed chronologically to come at a time when the war is collapsing around the Nazis' ears. So the commentator tells you that even Hitler's dog doesn't love him, that it's shying away, which certainly belies the inoffensive pictures you're watching.

This sort of moron approach is held pretty generally through the film, which is a shame, for what this sort of thing needs is intelligent editing.

The title—"Will It Happen Again?"—brings one up to the present and fadeout shots of the Red Army and Stalin, which are strikingly like the views you've had of the Nazis and Hitler. The point is clearly stated.

Also on the Pix bill is a reviva of "Lydia," the Hollywood film o 1941 which Julien Duvivier made from his fine French success, "Un Carnet de Bal.' Merle Oberon, Joseph Cotten and Alan Marshal have the leads. R. L. C.

Australia Asked to Make Gift to U. K.

Canberra, Australia, Sept. 15.—Prime Minister Joseph B. Chifley presented to Parliament yesterday a bill under which Australia would make a gift of 10 million pounds (32 million dollars) to the United Kingdom out of its taxation budget this year.

The gift will assist the United Kingdom in her own difficulties and in the contributions of more than 300 million dollars she will make to other European countries under the Intra-European Payments Scheme associated with the Marshall Plan program.

Australia made a gift two years ago to United Kingdom of 80 million dollars and has made large contributions to international relief programs. It also made gifts of wool to some European countries, was the fourth largest contributor to UNRRA, the second largest to the Children's Emergency Fund and the third largest to the International Refugee Organization.

The present gift brings Australia's total postwar contributions to United Kingdom and international relief to more than 200 million dollars. The population of Australia is only 7,600,000.

Taking Pictures

You Should Understand What Those Camera Markings Mean

By Ollie Atkins

DO YOU know what every indication on your camera means? Do you know its relation to the other basic parts of the camera and how to use these features of your camera to best advantage when you are actually making pictures?

It does not matter if your camera is a small hand affair or a complicated-looking Speed Graphic. You must understand what all the markings mean or your picture-making will always be a hit-or-miss affair.

This discussion includes the features on even the $1.98 model camera and progresses into what you should know to operate anything from the Cracker Jack special to the finest camera made.

If no shutter speeds or footage markings are apparent on your camera it is of the true "box" variety and you can figure it clicks away at 1/25th second with "universal" focus putting everything from 12 feet to infinity more-or-less in focus. This is the fool proof model Eastman Kodak, America's number one camera, and the slogan "you press the button, it does the rest" is still the tried and true family method of making snapshots.

All Same In Theory

Beyond this simplest of all photographic machines you will find shutter speed indications, lens aperture markings, distance scales for focusing, actual ground glass visual focusing, range finders and depth of focus scales.

Theoretically all cameras are identical. This means that if 1/50th second at F8 with distance of 15 feet is the correct exposure and focus on one camera it should be the same with all, providing identical film is used.

As an old newspaper photographer covering assignments with other lensmen, I have often compared my idea of the correct exposure with the other men's and usually none are using the identical shutter or lens settings. Yet, they all seem to get the picture. The reason for this is that cameras vary. But the differences in shutter speeds and developing techniques will never approach the differences in photographers.

Branch Out Later

After you become an old hand in the field of photography you, too, may take exception to the standards and make pictures any way you care to so long as you always get something on your film. For right now though that 1/100th second on your shutter means just that and you should set the lens aperture exactly at F/11 if you expect to get the exposure you anticipated.

One thing many people are puzzled by is why some cameras have both "T" and "B" shutter markings. They ask me why doesn't the time exposure fill the bill for both. Actually the time exposure would be very sufficient for most amateur needs. On the "T" exposure you must press the shutter release to open the shutter and press again to close it. With the "B" exposure the down thrust of the tripper opens the shutter and the release of the tripper closes the shutter. For short "time" exposures the "B" setting is best. You can operate the shutter faster and there is less danger of camera movement.

Use your camera enough so the mechanics of it come naturally to you. Subjects are not impressed with your fumbling over the lensboard with hesitant fingers guessing at what the numbers mean and where they are. Very much like driving a car, the mere decision of what speed and lens stop to use should be as automatic as shifting into first to get your car rolling.

Then the Subject

Knowing your camera well leaves you free to concentrate on your subject. If it is a person you can put him at ease with conversation relating to the picture you are attempting to get, with instructions as to what you want him to do and where his eyes should be looking. Your mind will be free to consider camera angle, lighting and composition if it is not worried about where is the 1-50th second marker, or will this or that shutter speed stop the action.

Use a regular system to prepare your camera for each picture. Decide on what speed you need to "freeze" the action, what lens stop will give you correct exposure at this speed? Set the footage scale for proper focus or view the image through the ground-glass; be sure your film is ready and hold your camera with firmness during the exposure to reduce spoilage of.

Most people are not good models. They feel very conscious of the camera and you and most of all of any bystanders who may be watching the goings-on. If you are a competent operator with your camera equipment having it strictly under you command and control, you will find nearly everyone will respect you for your technical knowledge and become better subjects for your camera because of their confidence in you.

For Cardiac Home

The Washington Chapter of the National Children's Cardiac Home will begin its fall activities with a dance Saturday at 9 p. m. in the Shoreham Hotel. Admission is $1.25, and proceeds will be used to further the work of the home.

Vote Intention Act Repealer Approved

Baltimore, Sept. 15 (AP).—Maryland's legislative council put its stamp of approval once again today on the perennial bill to repeal the State's Declaration of Intentions Voting Requirements Act.

The vote to present the repealer to the regular General Assembly meeting next January was 12 to 4. The act requires new Maryland residents to declare intentions of becoming residents of the State one year before they are allowed to vote.

Today's repealer was presented by Senator Stromberg (D., Howard) for the Commission on Corrupt Practices and Elections, which he heads.

Another bill presented by Senator Stromberg and approved by the council would require Statewide use of voting machines.

Earlier the council took under advisement a new State child labor law proposal that would raise the minimum employment age from 14 to 16.

The proposal was presented by Joseph F. DiDomenico, commissioner of the Department of Labor and Industry, on behalf of the Maryland Child Labor Law Commission, which he heads.

Under the new law prepared by his commission, children between 14 and 16 may be employed after school hours except in specified hazardous occupations.

Gainful occupations covered by the law do not include farm work, domestic service in a private home or "occasional employment by a householder in connection with the household" when the employment is outside school hours and, with the consent of parents.

DiDomenico noted that the new school-attendance law, effective next July, compels school attendance until age 16.

Five other general labor laws proposed by the commission would:

1. Require employers and employes to report any controversies to the State Department of Labor and Industry.

2. Compel employers to pay workers at least twice a month.

3. Refuse licenses to do work at home to applicants under 16.

4. Change the hours of work in factories manufacturing cotton or woolen yarns, fabrics or domestics of any kind from 10 to 8 hours a day.

5. Change the hours of women workers in any manufacturing, mechanical, mercantile, printing, baking or laundering establishment from 10 to 8 a day and from 60 to no more than 40 a week.

The council also took under advisement a bill to give the Maryland Workshop for the Blind exclusive rights to operate vending stands in public buildings. The proposal was offered by Delegate Charles M. See (R., Allegany).

of enforcing a Free State law which says no one can dredge for oysters in Potomac waters, which are under Maryland's jurisdiction.

It was pointed out that the start of this year's oyster season came at sunrise today. Consequently, Maryland police alleged the Virginia oyster boat was "making a lick," as the expression goes, out of season, as well as violating anti-dredging laws.

Virginia oystermen outwardly scoffed at the threat of increased watchfulness and persisted in their contention that you can't make a living "tonging" for oysters by hand in the deep waters of the Potomac River.

They will continue to "dredge" rather than to "tong," so long as they can elude the speedy craft of Maryland police with boats equally as fast or faster.

Virginians who depend on rich oyster beds near Swann Point and Cedar Point across the river from here maintain that the law, not the man who dredges for oysters, is at fault. They claim:

1. The Potomac River generally is too deep for profitable gathering of oysters by using hand tongs, a "back-breaking, grueling method."

2. The use of a dredge, a rake-like device trailing a net dropped off the side of a boat, not only saves labor and increases the catch, but also serves to revive oyster beds which may have become covered with sand and mud on the river bottom.

3. The Maryland law, which says that persons apprehended for violation of that State's act against dredging must be tried in Maryland courts regardless of domicile, is an "unjust, unilateral law" in which Virginia does not concur.

John E. Mayo, executive secretary of the Potomac River Oystermen's Association here, insists that any Virginian hailed into Maryland courts and convicted of such a violation will have his case appealed until it reaches the Supreme Court.

Mayo readily admitted that some oystermen were afloat, but said their activities consisted chiefly of "feeling out" the waters in "shake-down" operations.

The only oyster packing house in town—where the bivalves are bought from boats and sold to consumers—was buzzing with activity this morning.

Its proprietor, who believes that "any kind of publicity is bad," said none of his boats was in operation last night. Furthermore, they were still tied up at his dock in the forenoon today, he said.

Some 15 laborers were feverishly "shucking" oysters at his packinghouse, getting them ready for sale or cold storage.

Board No. 1 Tells 14 Men They're in 1-A

By Robert P. Jordan
Post Reporter

Joseph Samuel Hollister, an affable young accountant, knows what to say in a tight moment.

Word drifted down to him as he worked yesterday afternoon that he was one of the first men in Washington to be classified 1-A for the peacetime draft.

Said Hollister, his voice faintly incredulous: "Who . . . Me?"

Then he regained his composure with a game if somewhat weak chuckle, and that was that.

So it went yesterday as most of 13 other young men learned that District Draft Board No. 1 had decided they were "available for military service."

As they got the word (unofficial, for notification postcards will reach them today), the 46,263d registrant signed up for Selective Service here and draft headquarters mailed out its 3147th questionnaire.

Draft Board No. 2, meanwhile, met for its initial classification session and placed 13 more men alongside the 14 already checked off as 1-A by Board No. 1. A total of 28 questionnaires were studied by the board. Board No. 2 plans to post its names today.

Men born in 1929 will continue to make themselves available for military service today by signing up at the registration centers. Men born in 1930 before September 19 will bring the registration period to a close Friday and Saturday.

Hollister's story is similar to those of most of the men classified 1-A by Board No. 1 Tuesday. He's 24, single and not a veteran. He lives at 3726 S st. nw.

He wasn't in World War II because, like most of the others, a physical ailment kept him out. With him it's a "bum ticker." But he speaks for the others, physical ailment or no, when he says:

"If I'm going to end up going in, it'll be perfectly all right with me."

He plans to be married November 27. To that statement he now appends—". . . if I'm available."

The 1-A classification was "quite a surprise" to Ross L. Fore, 1514 26th st. nw., who was turned down in the late war because he had infantile paralysis as a child.

Twenty-five-year-old Fore, a correspondence clerk in the Navy Department, admits a hitch in the Army "would do me good." If the 1-A classification sticks, he has "no objections."

Frederick Young, 24, of 3068 M st. nw., feels this way about it:

"I was in the Army for four months during the war. They discharged me for physical reasons. I'm cured now and I'm tickled to death to think I'm able to go back and do the part I wanted to do during the war."

Young, a night club singer, hopes to be used as an entertainer in the event he's drafted.

It's pretty much the same with Andrew Daugett, 25, of 963 25th st. nw. Daugett, who is a helper on a milk truck, didn't see service in World War II because of "nervousness."

Said her: "I figure there's nothin' wrong with me now. I'm not surprised they put me in 1-A." He's ready to go if they take him.

Beginning in November, Selective Service will supply the armed forces with draftees. From Washington, 55 men will be taken in the first quota.

Here are the other District men classified 1-A by Board No. 1 when classification got under way Tuesday: Charles E. Seiler, 3022 Q st. nw., book salesman; John L. Miller, 1837 California st. nw., cook; Rudolph R. Smith, 1858 California st. nw., cab driver; John I. Witherspoon, 1607 15th st. nw.; Chasteen E. Willis, 1310 22d st. nw.; Homer C. Purdham, 1327 21st st. nw., bank employe; James F. Lewis, 2107 S st. nw.; Nelson Walter Gatewood, 2325 L st. nw., laborer; William H. Galbraith, jr., 2514 Tunlaw rd nw., and Frank L. Lavezzo, 3009 M st. nw.

Catholic Women Told Communism Must Be Defeated

The struggle against communism is the struggle for the survival of civilization, the Rev. John F. Cronin yesterday told a convention of the National Council of Catholic Women at their meeting in New Orleans.

Father Cronin, assistant director of the department of social action of the National Catholic Welfare Commission, Washington, told the women that Marxism, in denying the reality of God, inevitably denied the dignity of man.

"If communism rules the world, men will be degraded to the level of animals," he said. "They will be slaves to an inhuman system of exploitation."

The five-day convention was concluded yesterday. More than 5000 delegates attended representing some six million Catholic women.

U. S. Flier Walks Through 'Curtain'

Wiesbaden, Germany, Sept. 15 (AP).—Capt. Kenneth W. Slaker of the U. S. Air Force found a hole in the Iron Curtain and walked right through it.

He told newsmen about it today in describing his experiences in bailing out of his failing plane on a food flight to Berlin over the Soviet occupation zone in Germany.

Slaker, whose home in in Lincoln, Neb., and Lieut. Clarence Steber, Mobile, Ala., parachuted when their C-47 plane developed engine trouble early yesterday near Langensalza on the airlift run from here to Berlin.

Steber was the pilot and Slaker the copilot. Both suffered minor injuries. The Russians said the plane crashed near Erfurt, which is 20 miles southeast of Langensalza.

Steber encountered Russian authorities, who turned him over to the Americans in Berlin. Later he was flown to Wiesbaden.

It was a different story with Slaker, who merely walked from the Soviet into the American occupation zone.

"I passed at least 250 Russian soldiers, but none stopped me or even paid any attention to me," said the 28-year-old Nebraskan. "Apparently the Russians did not even recognize me as an American soldier." He was wearing coveralls.

High Air Force officers banned Slaker from telling exactly where or how he crossed the border. He wrenched his back and was knocked momentarily unconscious by his jolting landing after parachuting from a low altitude.

Colony Issue Tossed to U. N.

Paris, Sept. 15 (AP).—The United Nations had another problem tonight—what to do about Italy's colonies in East and North Africa.

The issue was passed to the U. N. General Assembly by representatives of the Big Four powers in a letter to U. N. Secretary-General Trygve Lie in which they told him Britain, France, the United States and the Soviet Union were unable to agree on the colonies' future.

The letter, signed by French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman, Lewis Douglas, American Ambassador to London; Britain's Minister of State, Hector McNeil, and Russia's Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky, was the last act of the abortive conference on the colonial question, which opened Monday.

To the last, the Western powers and Russia differed vehemently on whether the meeting was a Foreign Ministers' Council—as established at Potsdam—or merely as Vishinsky contended, a four-power meeting. The letter evaded this point.

Passing the question to the United Nations was in accordance with the Italian peace treaty, which gave the four powers a year to decide the fate of Mussolini's former empire. After this period, which expired today at noon, the issue automatically goes to the General Assembly.

Involved are the East African colonies of Eritrea and Somaliland, and the North African colonies of Tripolitania and Cirenaica, which the Italians grouped under the name of Lybia.

Special deputies of the four powers did agree in principle that Italy should receive a trusteeship over Somaliland, but remained divided on details. The Russians at one time proposed giving all colonies to Italy as a trusteeship, then in a surprise last-minute maneuver urged an international trusteeship over all of them.

The United States, which three years ago proposed a U. N. trusteeship for the colonies, also has changed its mind. It favors British trusteeship over Cirenaica, an Italian trusteeship for Somaliland, and postponement for a year on the question of the other colonies.

Tolstoy Kin Denounce Use Of Name Here

Moscow, Sept. 15 (U.P.)—Six direct descendants of Count Leo Tolstoy demanded today that American "political gangsters" stop trying to cover their "sinister deeds" under the name of the great Russian writer.

Mrs. Alexandra Tolstoy, a daughter of Leo, heads the Tolstoy Foundation, a White Russian anti-Communist organization in the United States.

In a letter to the Literary Gazette, Sofia, granddaughter of Leo, two grandsons and three great-grandsons of the count violently denounced Mrs. Tolstoy and her foundation and said they had learned "with indignation of the criminal acts of American intelligence directed against Soviet citizens living in the United States."

(This was a reference to the case of Mrs. Oksana Kasenkina, the Russian schoolteacher who said she leaped from the Soviet consulate in New York to escape imprisonment there. She had been brought to the consulate by Soviet officials from the Tolstoy Foundation's Reed Farm in New York, where she had been given haven. The Russian version of that incident was that American "criminal intelligence agents disguised as (New York) police" abducted Mrs. Kasenkina from the consulate.)

Countess Tolstoy Isn't Surprised

Countess Alexandra Tolstoy said today she was not surprised that her relatives in Russia had denounced her as a "spy" and a "traitor."

The countess, director of the Tolstoy Foundation here, was curator of her father's literary works and director of all schools founded in his name before she renounced the Soviet regime and came to this country.

"When I left," she said, "all of my relatives wrote to me begging me to come back to the Soviet and calling me a traitor."

Rookie Policeman Is Indicted for Attempt to Rape

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 15 (AP).—The grand jury yesterday indicted former patrolman Francis A. McPherson, 22, on a charge of attempt to rape Mrs. Virginia Chambers, stepdaughter of Police Commissioner Thomas G. Basil, court officials said today.

Mrs. Chambers testified at a preliminary hearing, June 3, that the rookie city policeman "knocked me down" and "put his hand over my mouth" May 18, as she walked home from an elementary school May Day celebration.

Among eight other indicements, three named George Handy Brown, who was charged with killing Standola Hamilton and William Duckett and attempting to kill Joseph Brown.

John Smith was charged with killing Leroy Spencer "with deliberate premeditation" on May 15.

Wade Decries Great Emphasis on Winning

Editor's Note: This is another in the series of stories dealing with football prospects of the leading schools in the Southern Conference area. Tomorrow's story deals with the University of North Carolina.

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Durham, N. C., Sept. 15.—Coach Wallace Wade, whose Duke football teams have won only eight games in the last two years, believes that the trouble with football today is that colleges are "placing too much emphasis on winning."

"It's not a wholesome situation when a university stresses winning football rather than education," said the 58-year-old coach whose Blue Devil teams have won six Southern Conference championships in his 13-year tenure here.

Here at Duke, Wade continued, there is no tendency to de-emphasize football. However, we don't stress winning as much as other schools."

This was quite a statement from a man who guided four Alabama teams and two Duke teams to the Rose Bowl and whose 28-year coaching record shows 185 victories against only 43 losses.

Wade insisted that his attitude was not a change of heart and he wasn't prompted to believe as he now says he does because this year's Duke team will be only fair.

"I've always felt that football had a vital, integral role to play at college, but I don't think educational institutions are operated to entertain the public," Wade said.

Why hasn't Duke been the postwar powerhouse that it was before the war, in which he served as an artillery colonel?

"Simply because we won't go along with the theory that a football player is a commodity and as such should be a part of the inflationary period.

"I won't be so naive as to say we don't help a boy. Sure we do, but we are sticking 100 per cent to the NCAA purity code. That's as far as our help goes and as a result we lose boys to other schools who simply outbid us. We don't think its worth $4000 or $5000 a year of any alumnus' money for a boy to play football."

If Wade's conscience hurt him when he said that, he didn't show it. Some say the war made a sentimentalist out of the old fundamentalist, but he says it didn't.

In the last two years at Duke he has experienced his worst two seasons since he started coaching back in 1919. North Carolina, Duke's arch rival only 12 miles away, has beaten him twice. What's more Carolina is getting the pick of the State's best high school talent, a source of material Duke had a priority on before the war.

No longer are the George McAfees, Freddie Crawfords and Dan Hills beating a path to the "Princeton of the South." Charlie Justice, so the story

Spahn Keeps Braves Five Games in Front, 5 to 2

Boston, Sept. 15.—The Boston Braves protected their first-place lead today with a 5-to-2 victory over the National League's cellar-dwelling Chicago Cubs in the final 1948 meeting of the two clubs.

Lefty Warren Spahn, batted out of action in his two previous starts against the Cubs, kept nine hits well scattered to chalk up his fourteenth win of the season and kept the Braves five in front of the Pittsburgh Pirates, who beat the Giants, 8 to 3.

The Tribesmen clinched the game by totaling four runs and all seven of their hits against starter Doyle Lade before he was yanked for southpaw Bob Chipman after six innings.

The Braves notched their first run with two out in the first inning on successive singles by Earl Torgeson, Bob Elliott and Jeff Heath. They added a second tally in the fourth on Bill Salkeld's double and a Mike McCormick single and then sewed it up with two more runs in the sixth, on a Heath single and three infield errors.

With one out in the seventh, the Braves filled the bases on two passes by Chipman and one by Jess Dobernic and Torgeson scored on McCormick's fly to right.

While the Braves were taking the sixteenth of their 22 starts with the Cubs, the Braves' Al Dark was forced to go hitless after connecting safely in his previous 19 games.

Boston Now Leads Yanks By Only 1½ Games

By Jerry Liska

Chicago, Sept. 15 (AP).—Boston's American League lead melted to a game and a half today as last-place Chicago exploded for 10 runs in the seventh inning and a 17-10 decision over the Red Sox in a zany season finale between the two clubs.

The defeat, which hung a fifth setback on League-Leading Pitcher Jack Kramer against 16 wins, was money in the bank for second-place New York and third-spot Cleveland, both idle today. Each gained a half-game on the leader.

Boston now has an 87-51 record for the season, against New York's 85-52, one and a half games behind, and Cleveland's 84-55, an even 3½ games off the pace.

Only consolation in Boston's trimming which gave the Red Sox a 14-8 performance for the season against the White Sox was the five-for-six hitting of League-Leader Ted Williams.

Thumpin' Ted's five one-baggers raised his season's average six points to .377.

Hero of the Pale Hose 17-hit assault on four Boston pitchers was Outfielder Taffy Wright whose grand slam homer paced Chicago's 10-run uprising in the seventh.

Wright, at bat twice, drove across five runs in the big frame, one shy of the modern major league record of six RBI's in one inning.

Pat Seerey also blasted a White Sox homer with none aboard in the fifth, his eleventh of the season. It made the score a still respectable 5-2, in Chicago's favor at that point.

Thirteen Chicago batters faced Boo Ferriss, Kramer's successor in the fourth frame, and aged Earl Caldwell, in the wild seventh in which the damage was achieved on three walks and only six hits.

The winner was Al Gettel, although he fled in favor of Howie Judson in the first of the seventh when Boston counted one run to trim Chicago's margin to 5 to 4.

Judson had to be yanked in the eighth when the Red Sox threatened to match Chicago's spree with a six-hit attack, including successive triples by Vern Stephens and Stan Spence, which produced five runs.

That chiseled Chicago's lead to 15-9, but the White Sox got to the fourth Boston Pitcher Tex Hughson for two more tallies in their half of the eighth. Rookie Tommy Wright, fresh from Louisville of the American Association, tripled as a pinch-hitter in the ninth and scored the tenth Boston marker on Dom DiMaggio's fly.

The Red Sox collected 14 hits off Gettel, Judson and Glen Moulder, who finished for Chicago.

Nats Drop No. 15, 4-2, Near All-Time Record

Detroit, Sept. 15.—Just five more defeats in a row and the sinking Senators will have tied an all-time American League record.

They lost their fifteenth straight today in 4-2 fashion to the Detroit Tigers and apparently are hot on the heels of the all-time league record of 20 held by the Athletics and Boston Red Sox.

Milo Candini was the loser in the 1948 finale between the two teams and the Nats left town on the short end of 16-6 count for their season's competition with the Tigers.

They lost to Rookie Lou Kretlow of Williamsport who was making his first start of the season in the big leagues. He gave up nine hits and the Bengals made 10 off Candini and Tom Ferrick who finished out the game.

Behind Early, 2-0

Candini was off to a poor start as the Tigers ran up a 2-0 lead in the first inning on singles by Eddie Mayo, Vic Wertz and Hoot Evers plus an infield out. He really had to scramble in the third when Mayo's second safety, a walk and a delayed throw on a bunt loaded the bases with no outs.

But Milo bore down to escape damage as he retired Evers on a pop fly and made Jimmy Outlaw hit into a double play. Once that threat was out of the way, the Nats came to life and went out to get some runs off Kretlow.

Candini singled with one away in the fifth for the fourth Nat blow, took second on an infield out and scored on Al Kozar's single to right. A walk to Mickey Vernon and Sherry Robertson's two-base drive knotted the count at 2-all in the sixth.

But the Tigers came back in the seventh to go ahead when Rookie Joe Ginsberg, a kid catcher, bounced a single off Vernon's glove, was bunted to second and came around on a double by Johnny Lipon. The Nats had a chance to tie it up again in the eighth when Robertson led off with his second double. But he died on third as Early Wynn batted for Candini and rolled out after Christman and Early also had failed to deliver.

Detroit pushed over its fourth run in the eighth at the expense of Ferrick, who walked Evers, served a single to Outlaw and a long fly to George Vico.

Dizzy Meets 'Friend' Happy

Cincinnati, Sept. 15 (AP).—Dizzy Dean, once one of baseball's finest pitchers and now a radio broadcaster of the sport, was called before Commissioner A. B. Chandler today.

"Just a 'nice, friendly little visit," Dean said as he hurried from the office to take a late airplane back to St. Louis and to work.

"I've known 'Happy' a long time."

When it was suggested that a man does not fly from St. Louis to Cincinnati for a 15-minute visit, and then hurry back by plane to his job, Dizzy just grinned.

Chandler, following policy, had nothing to say about the talk.

Dean waited for Chandler from about 12:40 p. m. to 2:50 p. m. (E.S.T.) along with his wife. He was in the commissioner's office about 15 minutes.

Dean has been broadcasting home games of the St. Louis Browns this year. He also has another program in which he tells stories, jokes and behind-the-scenes stuff on the players of today and yesterday.

The feeling in Cincinnati was that some of Dean's stories might have irked the baseball commissioner and Dean had been asked to soften his punch lines.

World Series Opens Oct. 6 In National League City

Cincinnati, Ohio, Sept. 15 (AP).—The 1948 World Series will open on Wednesday, October 6, in the city of the National League pennant-winner, Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler announced today after a meeting with officials from the nine teams still in the fl-g races.

Chandler said that all games will start at 1 p. m. of the city's prevailing time, except for Sunday games in New York and Brooklyn. Those would begin at 2:05 p. m. to conform to local law.

The starting date of the classic, which is three days after the end of the regular season, will be approximately a week later than last year's September 30 opening day. The latest starting date for a series was October 17 in 1910.

Clubs represented at the meeting were the Boston Braves, Pittsburgh Pirates, New York Giants, Brooklyn Dodgers and St. Louis Cardinals from the National League, and the Boston Red Sox, New York Yankees, Cleveland Indians and Philadelphia Athletics from the American.

The series will follow its traditional pattern with the first two games to be played in the National League city, the next three at the American League site, and the final two games, if necessary, in the city of the National Loop champion.

Chandler announced that there will be no time taken off for traveling unless the series is between th Cardinals and one of the Eastern clubs in the American League—Boston, New York or Philadelphia.

Admission prices will be much the same as last year—$8 for box seats, $6 for reserved grandstand, $4 for general admissions (standing room), and $1 for bleachers—with a few exceptions. City taxes will make certain tickets in St. Louis, Cleveland and Pittsburgh slightly higher, and some pavilion seats at $5 will be available if the Boston Braves reach the series.

Two Olympic Champs Meet Truman in Whirlwind Day

By Bus Ham
Post Reporter

Two Olympic champions met President Truman yesterday and all three thought the occasion was a pretty happy affair.

The youthful Olympic champions who called at the White House were towering Bob Mathias, Tulare, Calif., decathlon winner, and tiny, boyish Arthur Cook, Washington's winner of the rifle championship.

Mr. Truman took 17-year-old Mathias and 20-year-old Cook on a, personally conducted tour of the White House.

Later the President and his schoolboy callers faced a battery of photographers and newsreel cameramen.

After the boys with the boxes and popping bulbs had satisfied themselves with "Just one more, Mr. President," Mr. Truman said:

"In my opinion this is what makes the country great—to produce such men as these, who go out and make a name for themselves. It is good, not only for them but good for the country and for the world. I hope they will continue to be good citizens and will themselves have sons who win Olympics."

Mathias and Cook went from the White House to the Justice Department where they were honor guests of Attorney General Tom Clark at a dinner in his private dining room.

Mathias appeared at 9 o'clock on a national radio hookup (NBC-WRC) and received an award as the "Youth of the Year," presented by Attorney General Clark.

Attorney General Clark presented Mathias with a combination wrist and stop watch as the gift of the Theater Owners of America. This organization is taking the lead in carrying out President Truman's proclamation to observe September as "Youth Month."

Mathias flew into Washington from Kiski Prep in Pennsylvania, where he is preparing for entrance at Sanford University.

Standing 6 feet 2 inches tall, weighing 198 pounds and as handsomely proportioned as Max Baer, former world's heavyweight boxing champion, Mathias said that he is a premed student.

Mathias' father, a physician and surgeon, was a football player at the University of Oklahoma. Bob has two brothers, Gene, 20, and Jimmy, 14, and a sister, Patricia, 7. Older brother Gene was quite a track star in high school and helped Bob get started on the career that led to the Olympic title.

Bob's present ambition is to win the fullback berth on the Kiski Prep eleven this fall and says he can run the 100-yard dash in 10.3 seconds.

His trip to Washington was

Griffith Files Suit Over Police Bill

The Washington Baseball Club wasted little time protesting legally a $5947 bill handed it last Friday for police protection for the last three monts.

John E. Powell, Griffith's at-District Court asking for interney, yesterday filed suit in junctions to restrain the District government from collecting fees for stationing policemen and firemen at the park.

In no uncertain legal terms the attorney's lengthy complaint called the law "arbitrary, unreasonable and unjust."

Asks Hearing

The ball club wants a three-judge tribunal to hear its argument that the law passed by Congress last June is unconstitutional.

Griffith's suit termed the law "oppressive" because it's not to protect the plaintiff (Griffith) but to protect the public." It also charged that it's discriminatory. The suit claimed it favored other managers and owners of baseball clubs in that they don't have to pay similar fees.

It also argued that during the Christmas rush, policemen are stationed at department stores without these stores having to pay for the services.

Wade Hits Great Stress On Victory

goes, was all set to enroll at Duke, but the Blue Devils simply were outbid by Carolina.

"The NCAA's purity code will be enforced to the letter at Duke," Wade said. 'And I hope the Big Nne and Ivy League, who fathered it, do it, too.

"It's strange to me that they never objected to an Easterner or a Midwesterner enrolling at a Southern school. That is, they never objected until they learned that one of them was a football player. Then they let up a howl and a yell which resulted in the purity code."

As to the Duke 1948 team, Wade thinks it will be a bit more experienced than last year, but woefully lacking in reserves.

The tipoff on the '48 club is that Wade has only three men on his 55-man squad who played football in 1946 and is forced to use second-year-men, something he formerly did only in rare instances.

His single-wing offense lacks a good fullback, but is three-deep at tailback where Freddie Folger is the standout. The first-string line is powerful, averaging about 220 pounds, the biggest Wade ever has had. Tackles Al Derogatis and Louis Allen are the best in the Conference, Wade believes, and he is strong at guards and ends.

At center, Carl Perkinson and Johnnie Karmazin are waging a merry battle, but neither is the pivot man of the old Wade teams. Duke lost three left ends and had to switch Bill Duncan from right to left end. Ed Austin is a fixture at the other flank.

Two hundred-pounders Bill Davis and Jimmy Knott are the regular guards. Helping the triple threat, 175-pound Folger in the backfield will be Tommy Hughes, a great little competitor at wingback, John Montgomery, a Miami senior, at blocking back with either Ben Williams or Paul Stephanz, both 200-pounders, at fullbacks.

After that come an assorted group of youngsters "who are not quite ready for stiff competition, but we'll have to use them," according to Wade.

The schedule is a typical Duke schedule, not too tough, but tough enough. The opener is September 25 against North Carolina State. After that come Tennessee at Durham; Navy at Durham; Maryland at Griffith Stadium; V. P. I. at Roanoke, Va.; Georgia Tech at Durham; Wake Forest at Durham; George Washington at Durham; and the season's finale with powerful North Carolina at Chapel Hill, N. C.

only the third public appearance that Mathias has made since his return from the Olympics. The other two were on the West Coast.

Cook, 120 pounds and 5 feet 6 inches tall, sat beside Mathias in the Attorney General's office, looking younger despite the fact that he is three years older than Bob. Cook is majoring in mechanical engineering at Maryland University and hopes some day to become an expert in ballistics.

The one thing that Cook is sure of is that he never could use his remarkable marksmanship to "kill anything that's alive."

Mathias left by plane late last night to return to Kiski Prep to resume his studies.

Among those who attended the dinner in the Attorney General's private dining room were:

Julian Brylawski, Theater Owners of America; George Marshall, New York, Theater Owners of America; Jim Gibbons, WMAL; Arch McDonald, WTOP; Bill Brundige, WOL; Dutch Bergman, WRC; Bob Addie, Times-Herald; Eddie Cook, News; Francis Stann, Star; Leo Cadison, Justice Department; Don Miller, United States attorney from Cleveland; Dr. L. M. Clark, president of Kiski Prep, who accompanied Mathias to Washington; Ralph Pittman, Police Boys Club; Bob Simmons, Touchdown Club; Joe Aronoff, president of the Washington AAU, and Bus Ham, The Washington Post.

Favored Ned Canron Runs Third

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bel Air, Md., Sept. 15.—Waygood Girl, a 4-year-old filly who never defeated horses of the caliber she faced today, came through with a stretch rush that carried her to victory in the Bel Air Inaugural.

A crowd of 6500, the majority from Washington and Baltimore, watched the opening day program under cloudless skies.

Racing in the colors of N. J. Greco, Waygood Girl won by a going-away head margin from D. G. Smith's Audible with the Wild Goose Farm's Ned Canron, a slight favorite over Audible, in third position in the field of eight.

Jockey Jimmy Rankin rode the 4-year-old daughter of Gerald over the 7 furlongs in the time of 1:27 2/5 and her scattered backers collected a healthy $42.40 mutuel.

Audible Goes Wide

Audible set most of the pace but was forced wide at the first turn which probably cost the verdict. However, Audible had enough to race Briar Broom and French Nine into submission. In the stretch, Rankin brought Waygood Girl to the outside and she developed momentum.

At the end she had punch enough to collar the tiring Audible. Ned Canron, invader from New England, showed a rather dull effort although getting up for the show money.

Miss M. D. Weitzel was one of the happiest persons at the track today, her 3-year-old, Hoseah, won the fifth race. Hoseah, a $20 shot, was given to Miss Weitzel, who lives at Parkville, Md., for a Christmas present last year. This was the second straight victory for the son of Easton who scored at Timonium.

Hoseah had to win a photo decision today. N. Cohen's Baby Pauly went into the finish line nose and nose with the longshot. Third money in this field of 10 went to Mrs. Grinder's Ringside Table. Hoseah was clocked in 1:21 2/5 as he continued to roll up Christmas money for Miss Weitzel.

The day's steeplechase went to J. Grabosky's Mechanize, a $5.40 favorite, Jockey J. Wylie brought the 8-year-old home in front of six rivals. Horses and riders escaped injury in the 16-jump affair.

Washingtonians had a chance to cheer in the first race when Mrs. L. Starlings Strolling Don won at $34.80 after being saddled by Trainer Earl Auld. Both owner and trainer are from the Nation's Capital. Those who coupled Strolling Don with Wild Goose Farm's Big Three, the $8.40 winner of the second race, collected $118 on the 6-4 daily double combination.

Flam Bounces Gardnar Mulloy Out of Tennis Championships

Falkenburg, Parker Also Post Victories

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 15 (U.P.)—Young Herbie Flam of Beverly Hills, Calif., scored the biggest upset of the National Amateur Tennis Championships today by eliminating Davis Cup Star Gardnar Mulloy of Miami.

Apparently beaten wh he lost service to open the fifth and deciding set of their tense battle, the blond 20-year-old came driving back to rout his more experienced rival, 6—4, 7—5, 3—6, 4—6, 6—3, and reach the quarter-finals.

Unseeded Mrs. Virginia Kovacs, wife of the tennis pro and one-time clown prince of the amateur courts, turned in the only upset in the women's singles as she defeated fifth-ranking Shirley Fry of Akron, Ohio, 6—2, 5—7, 6—4.

Parker Wins

In other fourth round men's matches Harry Likas, sixth seeded American from San Francisco, walloped Adrian Quist, aging Australian Davis Cup star, 6—2, 6—3, 4—6, 6—4; two-time Champion Frankie Parker of Los Angeles waltzed past Frank Sedgman, Australia, 6—4, 7—5, 6—3, and Czech Davis Cupper Jaroslav Drobny dusted off Philadelphia's seventh-seeded Vic Seixas, 6—4, 9—7, 6—4.

Swarthy Dick Gonzales of Los Angeles, seeded eighth, upheld his ranking to gain the quarter-final round against Frankie Parker when he ousted San Francisco's Art Larsen, 6—2, 2—6, 3—6, 6—3, 6—2.

Joining Mrs. Kovacs in the lower bracket quarter-finals were defending champion Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif.; fourth-ranking Patricia Canning Todd of La Jolla, Calif., and Mrs. Madge Vosters of Secane, Pa.

Miss Brough bounced Nancy Chaffee, Ventura, Calif., 6—2, 6—2; Mrs. Todd defeated Mrs. David Gray of Washington, 6—0, 6—1, and Mrs. Vosters eliminated the final foreign woman challenger, Nelly Landry of France, 6—2, 6—2.

Fourth-ranking Bob Falkenburg of Hollywood gained the men's fourth round, a step behind the field, by winning an endurance match from Budge Patty of Los Angeles, 6—1, 4—6, 3—6, 6—4, 10—8. That gave him the right to face Nick Carter of San Francisco, with the winner joining the remainder of the survivors in the quarter-finals.

Kirby Beats Bettye White

Pebble Beach, Calif., Sept. 15 (AP).—Dorothy Kirby, Atlanta's outstanding woman amateur, defeated medalist Betty Mims White of Dallas, 3 and 2, in the third round of the national championship this afternoon.

Miss Kirby, runner-up for the title last year, toured the tough Pebble Beach for a first-nine 35, three under women's par and one under men's. She held a 2-up margin on the Texas champion at that stage.

Beverly Hanson of Fargo, N. Dak., advanced to the quarter-finals with a 5-and-3 win over Mrs. Creg Lifur, veteran from Pacific Palisades, Calif.

As a result of the win, Miss Hanson will meet Miss Kirby tomorrow. Miss Hanson beat Mrs. Joseph Herron of Portland, Oreg., 4 and 3 this morning, while Mrs. Lifur was taking the measure of Mrs. Ruth McCullah, Pacific Palisades, 6 and 5.

In another third-round performance, Helen Sigel, Philadelphia, swamped Patricia McPhee, San Mateo, 6 and 4.

In the second round, the eastern crack shot disposed of Alice Bauer, Long Beach, Calif., 2 and 1.

Peggy Kirk of Findlay, Ohio, came from behind to win from Betty MacKinnon of Mount Pleasant, Tex., 1 up.

Grace Lenczyk of Newington, Conn., cracked out a convincing 6 and 5 victory over Dorothy Workman, San Gabriel.

Tomorrow she will square off with Trans-Mississippi Titleholder Polly Riley, Fort Worth, who chalked up a 3 and 1 third-round win over Mrs. Ernest Blanton, Enid, Okla.

Coaltown Wins $30,500 Belmont Handicap

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—With the varsity—Citation—on the bench, Calumet Farm sent in the reserves today to handle the $30,500 Jerome Handicap at Belmont Park, and Coaltown upheld the stable's honors with an easy victory.

Turned loose by Jockey Newbold Leroy Pierson in the stretch just long enough to take full command, Coaltown was eased up to a gallop as he completed the one mile route five lengths before C. V. Whitney's Mount Marcy.

Furthermore, Coaltown settled any questions between himself and a stablemate, Free America, who just managed to make third place under the urging of Eddie Arcaro.

Completing the distance in a snappy 1:36 flat, Coaltown was only three fifths of a second off the stake record for the event established in 1923 by Cherry Pie.

A crowd of 20,045 set the Calumet entry off at odds of 1 to 3, and the payoff was $2.70, $2.10 and $2.10 across the board. Even without Citation in the race, the powerful Calumet horses produced another minus pool for place, totaling $483.93.

The scratching of Citation and six others left only 10 starters. Trainer Jimmy Jones withheld Citation because of the high weight of 132 assigned the triple crown champion.

It was the eighth victory in 12 starts this year for Coaltown, and his triumph was worth $21,450. This shot his earnings to $102,150 for one year of racing.

Women's League Calls Meeting

The D. C. women's major bowling league will hold an organization meeting Friday at 8 p. m. at Brookland Bowling Center, it was announced yesterday. The league opening is scheduled for September 29.

Representatives of the following alleys are expected to attend tomorrow's session: Brookland, Fort Davis, Hi-Skor, Hyattsville, Ice Palace, King Pin, Rosslyn and Takoma.

Gilmer Joins Redskins Drill

For the first time since August 14, All-America Harry Gilmer worked out with the Washington Redskins yesterday as they staged a pair of drills at American University.

Gilmer, whose leg was slashed in a West Coast practice, was able to pass and trot around the field although Team Physician Moran warned him against fancy twists while running.

The workout raised hopes of Gilmer's appearance in next Sunday's National Football League opener against the Pittsburgh Steelers at Griffith Stadium. He was declared definitely out of this Sunday's exhibition clash with the Chicago Bears in Baltimore, however.

Bullis Will Field Its Usual Strong Team; Eastern Poses Title Threat

South American Boy Cinches Guard Berth

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Bullis Prep, the strongest scholastic football team in the area last year, already figures to be the most interesting this season.

The Naval Academy's No. 1 Eastern prep school, Bullis usually attracts top athletes from New England, New York and Pennsylvania.

This year it has reached beyond its normal sphere and come up with a 17-year-old Argentine youngster who has never seen a football game before, but who is nevertheless earning a regular guard post.

The lad is Bob Doelling, a 200-pound 6-footer, whose family moved to Silver Spring from Buenos Aires a few months back. His dad, an American, has been chief purchasing agent for General Motors in South America. It's Bob's first trip to the United States.

Bob's athletic experience is confined mostly to rugby, a "cousin" of Yankee football. Coach John Maddox likes the boy's willingness to mix it with the roughest linemen.

The aspiring Admirals have only two returnees from last yea 's team which went undefeated and tied Marianapolis (Conn) Academy in the Lynn (Mass.) Shoe Bowl game. However, Maddox is optimistic, and believes the turnover may even be for the better.

Bullis plays its usual rough schedule, opening October 3 at St. Benedict Prep in Newark. It follows against Staunton, Va., Perkiomen, Pa., Army Plebes, Western Maryland "B," Fork Union, Va., Georgetown Frosh and Navy Plebes.

But the Admirals have the manpower and weight to go with the tough days ahead. The line will average around 200, and the backfield about 175.

Maddox is building his team around two boys from Bridgeton, N. J., one from Medford, Mass., and Center Ted Kukowski, who was Bullis' star in the Shoe Bowl Game.

End Dayton Warfle and Halfback Dick Wuzzardo paced Bridgeton to the South New Jersey high school title last year. Fullback Gino Pagluica was Medford High's standout in the high school 'Gator Bowl game in Jacksonville, Fla.

Washington schools are also well represented among the leading Bullis candidates. Quarterback Jimmy Joyce and End Dick Robey hail from St. John's, Tackle Roland Dixon from Anacostia and Guard Bill O'Reagan from Roosevelt.

Graham Beats Burch for Publinx Title

George Graham, who had to survive a playoff to get into the top flight, yesterday won the District Public Links championship at East Potomac, defeating Maste. Sergt. Tom Burch, 3 and 1.

Graham, who shot an 81 in the qualifying round, finished one under par in the 17 holes it took him to annex the crown yesterday He started well and was three-up at the turn. He quickly made it four-up by taking the tenth with a par 4 while Burch went one over.

Then Burch, who finished second in the Air Force championships in Texas, rallied. Birdies on the eleventh and twelth cut Graham's lead in half and after both posted pars on the thirteenth, Burch won the fourteenth with a birdie 3.

But Graham took the sixteenth hole with a par 4 and closed out the match with a birdie 4 on the next to last hole.

Burch had been favored for the title. In the quarter-finals, he eliminated Medalist Joe Ramirez 6 and 5. Yesterday morning, he overpowered James Grace in his semifinal test, 4 and 2. Graham advanced to the final round by winning over J. J. Kotvan, 5 and 3.

Seasoned Reserves Will Aid Ramblers

Coach Dick Mentzer's practice of using his reserves as much as possible figures to give Eastern a topflight contender for the Inter-high football championship.

The Ramblers lost every regular of last year's sixth-place team, but they have their seasoned second string back.

Eastern's line will average around 175 pounds, same as last year's, but Mentzer believes it will give the team better service than its predecessor after a few games.

Halfback Dick Hite and Buddy Dorand give the Rambler attack as much speed as any team in the city. Hite, a third-stringer last year, flashed promise with a 90-yard touchdown run against Roosevelt.

The Ramblers will use the T-formation for the second year. Replacing Sal DeGiorgi at quarterback are Don Adriani and Paul Magatutu. Adriani is a fine passer and punter.

Veteran Bernie Shipley has a good hold on the fullback job, but an inexperienced sophomore, Eddie Marr, may see lots of action at that spot in Eastern's opener Saturday at York (Pa.) High. Marr has shown natural ability in scrimmages.

NBA Makes Abe Greene Commissioner

Philadelphia, Sept. 15 (AP).—Abe Greene, president of the National Boxing Association since 1941, today was elevated to a newly created position of commissioner of boxing.

The 49-year-old Paterson (N. J.) newspaperman, largely responsible for the growth of the NBA to 69 members, will be responsible for the coordination of the sport in the cooperation with the new president—Fleman Adae of Miami Beach, Fla.

"In no sense of the word will I be a dictator," said Greene.

"But the National Boxing Association has grown so much in recent years and has so many ramifications that it was felt necessary to have a man who would have more authority than a president," he added.

The Federal Diary

Convention Hears Retirement Plan Of Administration

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 15.—The Administration's retirement program was uncovered here today at the convention of the National Federation of Federal Employes by Warren Irons, chief of the Civil Service retirement division. Irons said the administration would look with favor on amendments to the present law which would:

1. Permit employes to retire at 70 with less than 15 years of service, and

2. Allow married women on reaching retirement age either to accept a standard pension or else take a reduced annuity and sign over survivorship rights to members of their families.

But he said it would frown on many proposals to allow employes to retire on full pensions after 25 or 30 years of service regardless of age, and the several plans to allow employes in hazardous jobs to retire at 50 after 20 years of service.

Irons said flatly that retirement without regard to age was a mistake; that it was both unsound and ridiculous. In the Government today, he said, were 125,000 employes who have at least 25 years of service, and of whom 50,000 are under 55.

These employes, he said, are at the peak of their Federal careers and "we haven't the right to ask the Government to support a big bloc of them in idleness."

Irons explained that optional retirement was something of a myth. He said that less than 60 per cent take advantage of the present option to retire at 60 after 30 years of service and at 62 after 15 years of work. "Most of the people," he said, "stay in the service until they are hauled out in a wheelbarrow."

THE RETIREMENT chief said only one employe—a 65-year-old FBI agent—had retired under the new law which permits Federal workers who investigate, arrest, and detain criminals to retire at 50 after 20 years of service.

He predicted that amendments would be offered in the next Congress to bring munitions handlers, certain scientists, letter carriers, railway mail clerks, test pilots and other groups of employes who contend they are in "hazardous" jobs under the 50-20 law. He frankly told the delegates that he would oppose any extension of the law.

Earlier, the convention heard H. Eliot Kaplan, executive secretary of the National Civil Service League, predict that the Government service would grow another 50 per cent in the next 10 years. It will grow, he said, because of the demands being made by the public for additional services.

He declared that the public service "is the front line of Democratic action; that the strength of our Nation lies in the competency of its public servants."

"Economy in Government," he said, "must not be achieved at the expense of employes who are carrying on the vital functions. If agencies are overstaffed," he said, "they must be soundly and scientifically reduced, but the career employes must be given the support and incentives to enable them to fulfill their duties at the highest level of efficiency."

KAPLAN TOOK ISSUE with Irons on voluntary retirement after 25 or 30 years of service. He said the reason employes were demanding it was out of a fear of insecurity of their jobs. He recalled that many employes had been unjustly fired after 25 or more years of service. He suggested a law which would protect the retirement rights of those persons who are fired without reason after years of service.

Other speakers at today's session were William H. McReynolds, former administrative assistant to the President, and Henry F. Hubbard, vice chairman of the Federal Personnel Council.

The convention adopted strong resolutions which opposed transfer of the Civil Service retirement system to Social Security.

It also got squarely behind revision of the Classification Act as the best possible way to adjust classified Federal salaries. The convention had before it 24 resolutions—the largest number of any subject—in support of the Flanders bill which would overhaul the salary-fixing act and raise salaries for Federal officials. The Flanders bill would increase the average classified salary by $90 and it would give salaries and jobs a better relationship.

The independent union did not go on record for a new Federal pay raise. In addition to backing the Flanders bill, it approved a resolution which called for a Federal system of pay rates "sufficiently high to attract and keep the best qualified people."

The merit award, NFFE's highest honor, was made to Louis I. Kyer of this city for 1948, and to Gertrude E. Coyle of Washington for 1947.

Election of officers will take place tomorrow. The reelection of President Luther C. Steward and Secretary-Treasurer Gertrude McNally is assured. Henry G. Nolda of Washington is running for vice president to replace Ulrey Biller of Washington, who is not a candidate.

6 New Cases Raise Area's Polio Total to 148 for Year

Six new polio cases were reported in Greater Washington yesterday, raising the total for the year to 148. At this time last year, there were eight in the District and 16 in nearby areas of Maryland and Virginia.

New cases in the District were a 10-year-old girl of the 3200 block of Klingle rd. nw., who entered Children's Hospital September 8; a 20-year-old youth of the 400 block of Orange st. se., who entered Gallinger Hospital Tuesday; a 5-year-old girl of the 1300 block of I st. ne., who entered Gallinger Tuesday, and a 6-year-old boy of the 600 block of 10th st. ne., who entered Children's Monday.

The other two cases were a 17-month-old girl of the 1400 block of North Kenilworth ave., Arlington, Va., who entered Children's Hospital Tuesday, and a 13-year-old girl of the 9100 block of Kingsbury dr., Silver Spring, who entered Children's Tuesday.

The new cases brought the District total for the year to 82 and the nearby Maryland and Virginia total to 66.

Business Men Want Action on 'Loan Sharks'

The corporation counsel's office will be asked by the Federation of Business Men's Associations to bring out its proposed "loan shark" regulations, which have been in the making for a year.

At a meeting of the federation last night at the American Security & Trust Co. board room, J. J. Blank, federation president, declared he thought it was about time to bring the matter to public attention. His motion was adopted unanimously.

Federation members voted also to inform the District Commissioners of their displeasure at being left out of two city-wide committee appointed recently, and to ask for future representation on such committees.

The group discussed plans for a "National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week" campaign, which it is sponsoring jointly with the American Federation of the Physically Handicapped. A kick-off luncheon will be held at 12:30 p. m. October 4 at the Mayflower Hotel.

The group will elect officers October 19 at the Mayflower Hotel.

The question of the United Community Services retaining constituent units which are opposed by the group was discussed in a closed session.

Driver Pays Fine To Protest Police Signals System

An admittedly confused motorist paid a $5 fine here yesterday rather than promise to obey the hand signals of the District's traffic policemen.

"I can't understand their gestures, so how can I promise to obey them," said the motorist, Frederick W. Traband, 62, of 1344 Maple View pl. se. He is a Navy Yard machinist.

Judge Nadine L. Gallagher of Municipal Court found Traband guilty of passing through the intersection at 4th and M sts. se. Tuesday afternoon in violation of a signal given by Police Pvt. J. M. Johnson.

Sanders' Case Up

District Commissioners will hear argument on whether Harley G. Sanders should be reappointed a member of the Board of Examiners for Steam and Other Operating Engineers at a meeting this morning. The matter will be aired at the Commissioners' semiweekly session opening at 10 a. m.

Veteran Policeman Killed as Jail Van and Car Collide; Injured Prisoners Are Trapped in Overturned Vehicle

Pvt. M. P. Donoghue Crushed by Wheel; Pvt. Earl Johnson Is Seriously Hurt

District traffic deaths to date..49
Deaths this date last year.....52
Total deaths last year.....72

A veteran policeman was crushed to death and another seriously injured at 6:30 a. m. yesterday when a police van and automobile collided at 5th and K sts. nw.

Killed in the crash was Pvt. Mortimer P. Donoghue, 58, of 4902 Kansas ave. nw. Injured was Pvt. Earl Johnson, 48, of 629 Quebec pl. nw.

Police identified the driver of the auto involved in the collision as James J. Hartin, 54, of 1803 M st. ne., an employe of the Sacred Heart School in Bethesda. Hartin was shaken up but otherwise unhurt.

Prisoners Injured

In the police van at the time were 12 prisoners who were being taken to Municipal Court. All of them were examined at Casualty Hospital, after which two of the men, Glen Miller, 28, of 1015 L st. nw., and Aaron Townsend, 26, of 624 50th st. ne., were admitted to Gallinger Hospital.

Miller suffered contusions of the neck and body and Townsend a possible fractured left knee.

As police reconstructed the accident, the police van, which had just left the Second Precinct Station at 6th st. and New York ave. nw., was traveling south on 5th st. and struck the right front side of Hartin's automobile which was proceeding west on K st.

Donoghue, who was riding beside Johnson, the driver, in the cab of the van, was thrown through the right window and was crushed under the left rear wheel of the heavy van when it toppled.

Johnson was thrown clear of the van and lay in the street unconscious. He suffered three fractured ribs and a possible skull fracture. He was first reported in critical condition at Freedmen's Hospital, but his condition improved during the day and he was removed from the critical list.

The 12 prisoners were trapped in the locked van for 20 minutes. The key to the padlock on the back door of the van was in the pocket of Donoghue who was pinned beneath the van.

The prisoners were finally freed when a policeman, a former van driver, remembered that a duplicate key was usually kept in the cab.

In addition to Miller and Townsend, the prisoners in the van were Thomas Fuller, 24, of 1522½ 12th st. nw.; Albert Bellems, 39, of 1346 4th st. sw.; Ivan Hendricks, 33, of 1854 Alabama ave. se.; William Shoemaker, 46, of 817 5th st. nw.; John Bradley, 58, of 467 H st. nw.; Albert Brown, 30, of 1241 6½ st nw.; Josephy K. Smith, 29, of 1802 24th pl. ne.; Thomas E. Cobb, 38, of 1514 Marion st. nw.; David McField, 49, of 210 D st. nw., and John Lott, 28, of 4432 Falls terr. se.

The police accident investigation unit reported that ordinarily the traffic light at the intersection would have been operating at the time the accident occurred. However, the timer was 40 minutes slow and the light which should have blinked on at 6 a. m. did not go on until 6:40 a. m., 10 minutes after the accident.

John Maddox, operator of a filling station at 6th and K sts. nw., supplied a heavy jack which was used to raise the van so that Donoghue's body could be removed. The van was finally righted by a crane.

The tank of the van was smashed in the crash and gasoline drenched the street. Paassersby were kept back because of the danger of fire.

The accident brought Maj. Robert J. Barrett, police superintendent, other police officials and three patrol wagons and three ambulances to the scene.

Donoghue and Johnson had been working together on the police van assignment for a little more than a year.

PVT. MORTIMER DONOGHUE
Killed in collision

A native of Ireland, Donoghue was appointed to the force September 13, 1919. He had served No. 10 and No. 7 Precincts. He was transferred to administrative headquarters and van duty in June, 1947.

He was the brother of Lieut. Daniel Donoghue of No. 10 Precinct. He is also survived by his wife, Catherine; two sons, Patrick Francis, 22, a student at Marymknoll (N. Y.) Seminary, and Joseph, 16, a student at St. Charles' School in Baltimore, and another brother, Patrick, who retired recently as proprietor of a Northeast restaurant.

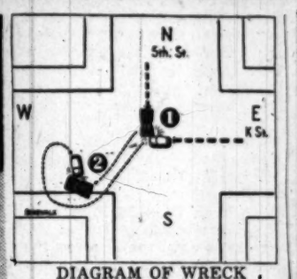

DIAGRAM OF WRECK
How collision occurred

Johnson was appointed to the force in October, 1933, and served in No. 2 Precinct before being assigned to drive the van.

In other accidents—two young sters—one in the District and one in Silver Spring, were struck by automobiles.

George W. Kiley 3d, 2, of 3911 Burns pl. se., was hit by an automobile at 12:05 p. m. in a driveway in front of 3924 Minnesota ave. ne. The child was admitted to Providence Hospital with a possible fractured right leg. Police said the car was driven by Hugo Franck, 63, of 4007 Connecticut ave. nw.

Katherine Snell, 4, of 8504 Houston st., Silver Spring, was struck by a car at about 9 a. m. at Houston and Hankin sts., Silver Spring, near her home. She suffered numerous cuts and bruises and a concussion and was admitted to Garfield Hospital for observation. The driver, police said, was David C. Smith, 18, of 6903 Prince Georges ave., Takoma Park.

Driver Exonerated In Woman's Death

A coroner's jury yesterday exonerated William B. Price, 39, of 339 13th st. se., of blame in the death of Mrs. Leische Poppe, 28-year-old wife of a Netherlands Naval attache.

Mrs. Poppe, who lived with her husband, Lieut. Janus Poppe, at 1018 Flower ave., Takoma Park, Md., was struck Saturday night when she stepped off a trolley loading platform at the corner of Georgia ave. and Van Buren st. nw. She died in Emergency Hospital Monday night.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald conducted the inquest.

Board Orders More History Study for High Schools

Third Semester To Be Devoted To Constitution And Government

District high school students will spend more time on American history under a plan authorized yesterday by the Board of Education.

Acting on a recommendation of Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning, the board voted to extend the two-semester course now required of all high school students to three.

Corning said the third semester will be devoted to a detailed study of the Constitution and the Federal and District governments. The new course will be set up by September, 1949, and will be a graduation requirement for all students who enter high school in February.

Board Criticized

The board, holding its first meeting of the new school year, was criticized by one of its members, Adelbert W. Lee, for "acting hastily and illegally" in transferring students who attended Powell Junior High School into classrooms in Central High Schol and moving Bell Vocational High students into the Powell building.

Lee declared the action illegal because it by-passed committees, including his committee on legislation.

Describing the transfer of Bell students to the Powell building as "a terrific extravagance," Lee said there were only 135 students enrolled in Bell on opening day.

Corning replied that he expected enrollments will pick up and pointed out that new quarters had to be found for the Bell enrollment last year of more than a thousand students.

Changes Name of Building

Over Lee's protests the board changed the name of the Powell building to the Bell Vocational School and redesignated Central as Central Junior-Senior High School.

In the three-hour-long meeting, the board also heard Ernest F. Harper, president of the Negro Federation of Civic Associations, declare that the board "has failed to provide Negro children with facilities for education and training comparable to those granted white children."

He asked the board to "find relief for Cardozo High School." Cardozo is operating under a staggered program with three shifts to provide space for 800 more students than the school was built to accommodate.

Dr. Corning told the board that current enrollments are below those of a year ago because of the loss of nonresident students who now have to pay tuition.

Corning said that actually there was a gain of 1439 students who live in the city.

Overcrowding in the elementary grades has increased part-time education totals from 2456 students a year ago to 2639, he said. Of that number, 1422 are in the white elementary schools, 28 in the white junior high schools and 1189 in Negro elementary schools.

Two Teachers Retired

The number of temporary teachers has been cut down from 459 of a year ago to 435, Corning said. Of these 375 are in the white schools and 60 in the Negro.

In a series of personnel changes, the board retired two teachers and made two major appointments.

Retired were Mrs. Rose L. Thompson, 915 Garland ave., Takoma Park, Md., teacher at the Park View School after 25 years of service, and Mrs. Gertrude E. Hill, 1718 2d st. nw., teacher at the Bundy School, after 42 years.

Mrs. Roberta S. Barnes, principal of the Park View School, was promoted to associate professor at Wilson Teachers College in charge of the Truesdell Laboratory School.

Eugene Griffith, commercial subjects teacher at Anacostia, was named assistant principal of Anacostia.

The meeting was held at the Franklin Administration Building, 13th and K sts. nw. Dr. George D. Strayer, director of the $100,000 survey of District schools authorized by Congress, and seven members of his staff, were present.

Police Check Cab Drivers' Liquor Trade

Montgomery County police were investigating reports yesterday that Bethesda cab drivers were violating State law by delivering liquor to patrons.

Police learned that residents were calling cab companies and ordering alcoholic beverages brought to their homes. Some cab firms oblige for the price of the fare and the whisky, police said.

Disclosure of the practice followed the arrest of John W. Hartley, 21, of 4801 North la., Bethesda, a cab drive, on charges of illegally transporting and selling wine.

Hartley was allowed to post $52.50 collateral on the charge and one high police official expressed belief he "got off light." Future violators, he said, would have to answer in court.

Police Chief Charles M. Orme said he did not know where the cabbies obtained the liquor. If they get it in the District, he pointed out, the drivers also would violate State laws providing that only two fifths of alcoholic beverages a month may be brought in by any resident of the State.

He said it was probable they were getting the liquor at the Bethesda dispensary but mentioned that some might be bootlegging.

FBI Captures 2 Soldiers Sought On Auto Charges

Quick action by Federal Bureau of Investigation agents and an automobile chase through the the Northeast section of Washington Tuesday night resulted in the capture of two 19-year-old soldiers sought on charges of violating the National Motor Vehicle Act.

FBI officials said the two soldiers, Pvt. Paul R. Parker, 312 10th st. ne., and Pvt. James McGuire, 1446 Harvard st. nw., escaped Sunday from the stockade at Fort Bragg, N. C.

FBI officials said they went to Parker's home Tuesday night after learning he had escaped from the Army post. When they approached, Parker saw them and drove off down the street. At 11th and Maryland ave. ne., they said, he sideswiped a gasoline truck and then a parked car at 14th and F sts. ne. He then stopped and attempted to run from the scene but was caught by FBI agents.

Other agents took McGuire, peacefully, at his home early Wednesday morning.

Both youths, FBI officials said, were arraigned yesterday before the United States Commissioners and are being held pending action of the grand jury.

Taverns Fear 95% Liquor License Loss

If a proposed change in the local liquor law is approved, 95 per cent of the District's "C" and "D" dispensers may lose their licenses, the Tavern Owners Association of Washington charged yesterday.

However, Mrs. Agnes K. Mason, member of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, said the controversial amendment, proposed by the ABC Board and now before the Commissioners for study, would merely supplement the present 15-year-old provision that the sale of alcoholic beverages must be "incidental" to food sales.

The law says a restaurant proprietor, holding a "C" license, must satisfy the board his chief source of revenue is from meals rather than beverages. Similar provisions apply to taverns that have "D" licenses for sale of beer and light wines.

The proposal before the Commissioners, which was given a public hearing in July, would require licensees to provide a breakdown of sales figures to show the relation of the beverage revenue to food revenue, Mrs. Mason declared yesterday.

"This would help our inspectors, who check on these sales, to get an accurate picture," she said.

But Philip Guarino, president of the Tavern Owners Association, and many fellow members, see the proposed amendment in another light.

It would make it possible for dishonest proprietors to "fix" their figures of beverage sales percentages, he declared, while honest licensees with accurate books would be penalized "because 95 per cent sell more liquor than food."

However, Mrs. Mason said the "over-all picture" is taken into consideration, rather than the short-term view, in checking food and beverage sales.

The important thing is for licensees to have the facilities, equipment and intent to sell food as the principal source of revenue, she declared. Action on the food sale provisions has been taken against very few licensees, she pointed out, and then only after a full study of the cases over a period of time.

J. F. Stewart Sued For Limited Divorce

Installation Workers Set to Picket C & P

Washington installation workers yesterday reaffirmed plans to picket Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. central offices here beginning at 6 a. m. Friday.

George Lawler, business agent for the Washington division of Local 96, Association of Communication Equipment Workers (CIO), said union members will meet tonight at 8 at Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw., to receive final instructions on picketing.

The walkout, to be Nation-wide, was scheduled last week by national officers of the ACEW to protest failure to win contract demands from the Western Electric Co., supply division of the Bell System.

Earlier yesterday, Washington telephone unions affiliated with the Communications Workers of America (Ind.), held "preliminary" conferences on wages with the C. & P. company here. They met at Hotel Washington.

Miss Mary Gannon, president of Division 50 of the CWA, announced that "we just bargained" . . . got no place, that's all." She said the union "made no demands and the company made no offer." No date was set for a second meeting.

Glenn Watts, president of Division 36, reported that union-management negotiators met for more than two hours but there "were no significant developments." He said the unit asked for "substantial" wage increases, but did not specify a figure. Another conference was set for 10 a. m. Monday.

Both unions signed contracts last May which permitted two wage reopenings with provision for cancellation in the event no agreement is reached on wages during either of the reopenings.

Writ Bars Hyattsville Park Meters

A temporary injunction restraining the City of Hyattsville from installing parking meters at the Queens Chapel Manor shopping center in West Hyattsville, Md., was issued yesterday by Judge Charles C. Marbury in Prince Georges County Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro.

The suit named the mayor and city council of Hyattsville, the Circle Paving Co. of Washington and the Mi-Co Parking Meter Co. of Covington, Ky., as defendants.

Plantiffs are the Newton Properties, Inc., Eugene A. Smith, president, and Ernest L. Smith, secretary, of the corporation. They are represented by T. Hammond Welsh, Washington attorney. The plaintiffs posted $1000 security bond to protect the town against loss in the event the suit is decided against them.

The petition declares that Newton Properties and the Smiths are owners of the shopping center property and that the sidewalk has not been dedicated to public use either expressly or by implication. It also claims that installation of also claims that installation of the parking meters will cause the plaintiffs "irreparable damage."

Dissolution of the injunction may be asked by the defendants after they have filed their answer and given five days' notice to the plaintiffs, the judge ordered.

Hyattsville has ordered installation of 200 meters in the business districts, of which West Hyattsville is one. Merchants have fought the move for six years and now have threatened through Attorney Hervey G. Machen to file suit for injunction. The meters were ordered a week ago by the City Council.

Police Broke Leg in Arrest, Man Charges

Two Fifth Precinct policemen handled him so roughly that his right leg was broken in two places, a 43-year-old painter complained yesterday after arraignment on a drunk and disorderly charge.

James O. Robertson of 314 9th st. se. came into the courtroom of Municipal Judge Ellen K. Raedy on crutches, his leg in a cast. He was granted a trial delay until September 22 to allow him time to produce three witnesses.

Robertson, after leaving the courtroom, told reporters he was arrested Monday night by Pvts. John A. Panetta and Lenpie M. Daniels of the Fifth Precinct.

He charged that they broke a lock to enter his home, dragged him from the house down a flight of iron porch steps, struck him on the head and kicked him into a patrol wagon. Robertson was treated at Gallinger Hospital after his arrest.

Both policemen denied they had beaten Robertson, although they admitted they had forcibly led him from the house when he refused to go willingly.

Police records show that Robertson has been arrested 60 times since 1927 on a variety of charges, including drunk and disorderly conduct, assault, threats and petty larceny.

Capt. Thomas Edwards, commanding officer of the Fifth Precinct, has ordered an investigation into the charges.

Rabbit the Horse Just Disappears . . .

A horse named Rabbit is lost.

And not for want of a nail, either At least, so far as anyone knows.

Alexander Hagner of Potomac, Md., who reported the loss to The Washington Post yesterday, said the horse, a $2000 dark brown mare, belongs to his 14-year-old daughter, Susan.

It disappeared Tuesday morning after Miss Bele Hagner rode it in from a chase at Ray Norton's farm, near the Congressional Country Club, and turned it over to the groom.

One minute Rabbit was in the paddock—the next she was off, over a fence and gone.

If you see a horse which looks gently dispositioned and able to "jump the moon," she is probably Rabbit if she is wearing a rope halter and white star in her forehead. And if she is, the Hagners, at Chestnut 7121, would like to know.

Beaver Heights Zone Hearing Is Postponed

Petitioner and opponents alike failed to appear yesterday at a hearing on a petition for industrial rezoning of four lots near Addison rd. and R st., Beaver Heights, Md.

The Prince Georges County Commissioners, sitting as a District Council for zoning petitions, continued the hearing until October 20 to permit both to be heard. The applicati , made by the Ceco Steel Products Corp., had been filed after the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission had recommended industrial zoning for that area. Residents protested, however, at public hearings on the proposed new zoning ordinance for the county and the recommendation was withdrawn.

The commissioners approved the application of Albert F. Bobick, Jr., owner, for reclassification from residential to commercial of two lots near the intersection of Rhode Island ave. and Branchville rd., Branchville, Md. They also approved the petition of Frank Lillard for change from residential to commercial of property fronting on Landover rd., the George M. Palmer Highway and the access road between the two roads in Landover.

Application of Dr. Howard F. and Ruth Powell Strine was granted for apartment use zoning of nearly 18 acres of the Nettie Jan Klock Farm, 7500 Walker Mill rd., near District Heights, for a garden type apartment development. The planning commission had opposed the petition because it is a rural residential or agricultural area with no water or sewer facilities.

Requests of Edward N. Lightbown, agent, for industrial zoning of 20 lots between Kenilworth ave. and proposed new River rd., near Bladensburg, was denied. A delegation from adjoining Newton Village appeared to oppose the change and offered a petition containing 110 names.

Couple in Early Forties, Who Drink and Serve Liquor Very Moderately in Their Home, Dread Moral Censure if Wife's Parents Discover This

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a wife and mother, in my early forties, happily married 15 years. I am an only child, my parents are completely wrapped up in me and my family, and mother is a very positive person who has always assumed that her ideas are right.

Also she unconsciously expects to be told what she wants to hear, and in growing up I learned that was the best response to her, and father is aware of it, too. Due to her frequent spells of poor health—nervous breakdowns in my childhood and a heart condition more recently,—we have always been careful with her, and while this devious course definitely disturbs me, I have adhered to it nevertheless.

My parents oppose drinking and for some years after marriage my husband and I neither drank nor served liquor, but more recently we've been doing both, very temperately. Now my parents are coming soon for a visit of several months, and the problem is how to work out a civilized adjustment to their viewpoint.

Wife's Mother Would Worry Herself Sick

WHILE father would be disappointed, I believe he would accept the situation in the light of present-day customs, but mother would be terribly upset that we had "stooped" to liquor. She considers it morally wrong and probably would worry herself sick, and I don't want the visit marred by discord.

Perhaps my conscience would bother me less if I were to give up liquor altogether, as my religion doesn't sanction it; yet I do enjoy a drink on occasion and John favors it as a friendly amenity in certain circumstances, although we could go indefinitely without missing it.

I'd rather not serve liquor while my parents are here, but if friends should drop in, to whom we've served liquor before, I'd feel a bit awkward offering only a coke, and even if we had no liquor in evidence, I wouldn't know what to say if the subject came up. Mother finds it difficult to recognize, much less accept, the fact, that I'm a grown woman; hence my dilemma. Please advise. C. P.

Wife's Fear Derives From Her Immaturity

DEAR C. P. Essentially, there are two problems here. One, your mother's "momism." The other, the fact that you don't accept yourself as a grown woman in instances where your adult-age attempts to accommodate yourself to other social relations run contrary to your mother's rigid rules of conduct for herself and household subjects.

There is an old saying that others accept a person at his own evaluation of himself, and so long as you, in firsthand dealing with your mother, feel and react as if you are a "child" (naughty or nice, as the case may be) in that relationship, for so long will she continue to wield a big stick over you as such.

Although in the forties, and a matron and mother, you are strikingly immature. A classic symptom of immaturity is lack of courage

Simple Wedding Planned

Trans-Atlantic Romance To Unite 'Tatty' Spaatz And Walter Bell Saturday

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

DUE to Washington's recent epidemic of Anglo-Saxon weddings—which included Admiral Sir Henry Moore and his aide-de-camp—both taking unto themselves American brides—a new gag has been coined. Britishers, they say, are now reserved for export only!

Newest transatlantic alliance will be Saturday's wedding of Katherine Spaatz, eldest daughter of Gen. and Mrs. Carl Spaatz, to Walter Bell, private secretary to Britain's former Ambassador Lord Inverchapel, and the son of Canon George Fancourt Bell.

"Tatty" Spaatz is a graduate of Sweetbriar College. During the war she worked with the OSS in both New York and Washington offices, then joined the Red Cross. She was stationed in England for a year then, with the first clubmobile group, which was the first unit to follow up our Normandy invasion. Her group stayed with and followed the Second Division across the Continent and finally celebrated VE-Day with them in Pilsen, Czechoslovakia.

Tatty's maid-of-honor and sole attendant, incidentally, at Saturday's small family wedding, will be Virginia Sherwood, a niece of author Bob Sherwood, and the director of her clubmobile unit.

Walter, who has been in this country for a number of years, worked for some time in the New York office of the British Information Service. He came to Washington with Lord Inverchapel and acted not only as secretary but speech writer and general public relations expert for the Ambassador. Walter went home in early summer, returned to Washington yesterday. He has a new job in the British Foreign Office, and after a month's wedding trip in France the Bells will live in London.

Ceremony at Wilson's Home

THE Spaatzes are in the embarrassing position of being Washington D.P.'s (Displaced Persons). After retiring from command of the Air Force, General Spaatz's Fort Myer quarters were turned over to his successor, Lieut. Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg. Their new Georgetown house is still in the tedious process of being done over so they've borrowed the Lyle Wilson's Massachusetts ave. residence for the wedding.

The bride-to-be is staying with the Wilsons and the Spaatzes are tucked in with General and Mrs. Brady. The two younger daughters, Mrs. Emmett Gresham and Carla Spaatz will stay with other friends. Only the immediate family will be asked to the ceremony and a few intimate friends to a reception. Tatty is to wear ankle-length ivory taffeta and so far no one has figured out whether she'll have flowers in her hair or what. Anyway, everyone's delighted about the match!

Three friends, Helen Kirkpatrick, William Walton and John White, are joining in giving a party for "Tatty" and her fiance Friday night at Mr. Walton's house.

India's Commander Known Here

WITH fighting practically everywhere in the world it's sad but interesting for Washingtonians to know that the commander in chief of India's troops, which are engaged in what's called a "policing operation" in Hyderabad, was once a popular figure here. He's Lieut. Gen. Maharaj Shri Rajendrasinhji, who served as aide to India's Agent General, Sir Girja Sanhar Bajpai.

The general is a member of the ruling family of Nawanagar, a state in western India just north of Bombay, and is a cousin of the late Prince Ranj, the famous cricketeer. The general received a D. S. O. when he commanded the Second Royal Squadron during the North African campaign. His second in command is Brig. Gen. J. N. Chaudhuri, a brother of the Military Attache in Washington's Indian Embassy.

Mrs. Darlington Entertains For Miss Davis, Bride-Elect

WITH fall flowers around the house in colors of gold, yellow and white, Mrs. McCullough Darlington entertained yesterday in honor of Miss Nancy Ellicott Davis. The latter is the bride-elect of Frank Bass Williams, and her wedding will take place Saturday at St. Alban's Church.

The hostess was assisted at the party by her two young daughters, Teena and Becky, age 5 and 2, both dressed in blue. Guests who included friends and members of the wedding party were received from 6 to 8 o'clock.

Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Jefferson Davis, parents of the bride-elect, were there, as well as the bride-elect's five sisters and her great aunt, Miss Ellen Douglas of Margate, N. J. The five sisters will take part in the wedding. They are the Misses Laura, Mary Ellen, Patricia and Marguerite Davis and Mrs. Robert Ryan Crowder, jr.

Richard Williams, brother of the prospective bridegroom and best man, was at the party, as well as the bridegroom's sister, Miss Athlynn Williams. Among other guests were Mr. and Mrs. George Waterhouse, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Imrie, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Surba and John Daniel, cousin of Mr. Williams. Also Mr. and Mrs. Richard Oulahan, William Beal, Percival Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. James Whitehead, Mr. and Mrs. William Shuler, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Spangler and Mr. and Mrs. John L. Porter. Mrs. Spangler and Mrs. Porter are sisters of Mrs. Darlington.

Service Fashion Show Planned

"From Commissary to Military Ball" is the title of the fashion show-luncheon which will be presented September 30 by members of the Society of the Daughters of the United States Army. The event will take place at the Fort McNair Officers' Club, and proceeds will be for the benefit of the society's charity fund.

Service wives and daughters will serve as models for the show. Fashions will be from the shop of an Army daughter, Mrs. Bernice Smither Gering, who operates Personality, Inc. Mrs. Gering is the daughter of the late Gen. Henry C. Smither and wife of Capt. George W. Gering, USA, retired. She will be commentator for the opening half of the show when California casual wear will be presented.

The second part of the show will feature cocktail, dinner and evening wear from the shop's custom-made department. Commentator will be Miss Dawn Bentata, designer for Personality, Inc.

While Miss Bentata is not an Army daughter, she is affiliated with service circles, being in private life the wife of Maj. Hal S. Steward.

The benefit is open to the public and tickets may be had by calling Mrs. Lesley Ashburne, Wisconsin 0854.

Mrs. John Snyder Receives YW Leaders at White House

Young women leaders of Y.W.C.A. organizations in many foreign countries came to tea at the White House yesterday as part of the program planned in their honor on their visit to the Capital.

Mrs. John Snyder, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, assumed the hostess duties in the absence of Mrs. Truman, who is vacationing at her nonofficial home in Independence, Mo. The Cabinet wife received in a sheer black crepe and a pink hat with black velvet ribbon.

The foreign women—most of them in their early thirties—have just completed a study conference at Columbia University, N. Y., on what they can do, through the foreign chapters of the "Y," to reconstruct their homelands.

The month's conference, conducted at Columbia's Teachers' College, is to be followed by individual tours of the "Y" chapters throughout the United States.

Possibly the most picturesque of the guests was Miss Rah Rallia Ram, general secretary of the Pakistan Y. W. C. A. She looked immaculate at a news conference following the reception yesterday in her sari of soft steel blue over brilliant red. Her waved black hair was parted in the middle and swept back on either side in a loose roll. Her jewelry consisted of earrings, a ring and pendant of the traditional "nau rattan," or nine-stone pattern.

She said most of her time when she returns home will be spent organizing teen-age clubs and college social groups patterned after those in this country. And she said she is most anxious to make a first-hand study of the pioneer teen-age clubs in Los Angeles, Calif.

This Pakistan leader's emphasis on reconstruction of her nation's youth is typical of the YWCA program planned by other war-ravished countries.

On the other hand, representatives from Latin America and other comparatively wealthy countries are concerned mainly with helping their women find responsible positions away from the home.

Miss Demolin Speaks

This was expressed quite explicitly by the pert delegate from Uruguay, 27-year-old Miss Mireille Demolin, student secretary of the Y at Montevideo. She said the Y in her country concentrates on broadening women's interests in politics, industry, etc., and taking care of children whose mothers are employed. And she even boasts that it would be a simple matter for a woman to become President of her nation.

Miss Demolin, who was educated at Evansville (Ind.) College and looks and speaks very much like the average North American girl, will devote much of her stay in the United States to studying counseling services of the U. S. chapters.

Mrs. Marly de Barros, general secretary of the Rio de Janeiro "Y" and former National Women's Tennis Champion of Brazil, is another member of the foreign delegation.

The 37 foreign guests will meet for tea tomorrow afternoon with wives of Cabinet members, Supreme Court Justices and officers of the Diplomatic Corps from 4 to 6 p. m. at Barker Hall, 17th and K sts. nw., and spend the rest of the day sightseeing. They will leave Washington on Friday.

Jaipur Visitors Feted at Embassy

THE MAHARAJA AND MAHARANI OF JAIPUR were entertained last evening at a dinner by the Indian Minister and Mme. Nehru. The party was given at their apartment at the Shoreham Hotel.

Guests were the British Ambassador and Lady Franks, the Indian Ambassador and Lady Rama Rau, Armanath Atal, Finance Minister of Jaipur, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Muir, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Satterthwaite, Mr. and Mrs. John Davis and Col. Unni Nayar of the Indian Embassy.

Earlier in the day, the Maharaja and Maharani were entertained at cocktails by the British Military Attache and Lady Prior Palmer.

To Michigan

Miss Jane Kirch, a resident of Falls Church, Va., is entering the University of Michigan this fall. She was graduated from Holy Trinity in June. An older sister, Miss Mary Louise Kirch, received her degree at the University of Michigan last June.

Embassies Mark Independence Day

MEXICO and five Central American countries observed Independence Day yesterday.

Members of the Guatemalan colony were received at cocktails yesterday by the Ambassador and Senora de Gonzalez-Arevalo between 5:30 and 8 o'clock.

Mexicans gathered at the embassy for a party from 9 to midnight, when toasts were offered to continued freedom. The Charge d'Affaires and Senora de la Colina acted as host and hostess.

The Embassy of Costa Rica did not have an official party, as the Ambassador and Senora de Esquivel and their children are on holiday in Costa Rica, and will not return until the end of the month.

Nor was an official party held at the Embassy of El Salvador. The Ambassador and Senora de Castro sailed from New York yesterday on the Queen Mary to attend the U. N. conference in Paris. Another Ambassador on board the Queen Mary was Don Guillermo Sevilla-Sacasa of Nicaragua. He will also attend the Paris conference. Senora de Sevilla-Sacasa remained in Washington, but there was no entertainment at the embassy.

The Ambassador of Honduras and Senora de Caceres passed the day quietly, as they have just returned from Atlantic City.

Panama was not included, as her independence day is November 3. She was a part of Colombia when she broke away from Spain in 1828, and it was November 3, 1903, that she seceded from Colombia. Countries which celebrated their independence yesterday won freedom from Spain in 1821.

Envoy of India Sees Early End Of Hostilities

By Genevieve Reynolds

The Indian Ambassador, Sir Benegal Rama Rau, yesterday predicted an early cessation of the fighting in the princely state—Hyderabad. At the same time, he implied that the Indian Army would be victorious in reaching its goal—the garrison city of Secunderabad.

Giving his version of the conflict now waging in that state, he declared that the "present situation is not an invasion but a move to restore the Indian troops in Secunderabad where they had been stationed from 1898 to 1946."

Speaking informally at the American Newspaper Women's Club's tea where he shared honors with his wife, Lady Rama Rau, and his daughter, Santha, the Ambassador said, "As soon as law and order have been restored in Hyderabad the people will hold a plebiscite to decide their own destiny. They will be allowed to determine their future relations with the Indian Union."

Ruled by Nizam

Sir Benegal maintained that "Hyderabad is ruled by a fabulously wealthy Nizam who can count his income into the billions of dollars; that the Nizam refused to modernize his autocratic, feudalistic empire and give the people a democratic constitution to work and live by; that it was the only princely state failing to introduce democratic institutions."

The Indian Envoy described "Hyderabad as one of the most antiquated of the princely states and its 16 million population in a 80,000 square mile area among the most backward.

"While 85 per cent of the population is Hindu all the high posts are held by the Moslems who form only about 10 per cent of the total populace," he explained.

Referring to the Hyderabad fighters the Razakars, the Ambassador said, "they are similar to Hitler's storm troopers," and they are being supplied with arms from "some other European and other countries."

The Ambassador recalled Ghandi's policy of nonviolence and pointed out that Nehru, the present leader of India, is a disciple of the great Mahatma and would not advocate force unless essential.

When asked how strong the Communist Party is in India during a question-answer period, the Ambassador replied that the "Communists are strong in industrial areas and are a great nuisance in instigating strikes. Their voting power, however, is weak."

He went on to point out that Communists are jailed when they advocate the overthrow of the Indian government . . . that Nehru believes not only the Communists but any other group advocating the violent overthrow of the government should be put out of circulation.

Prior to the Ambassador's impromptu talk, Lady Rama Rau told briefly of the Indian Women's Movement in which she played an active role.

Miss Grace McGerr, club president, introduced the three honored guests.

Among the some 100 guests present were Mrs. Allen D. Price, wife of Captain Price, USN, Capt. and Mrs. Thomas Kelley, Mrs. Omar Burleson, wife of the Texas Representative, Mrs. Leslie Biffle, Mrs. Leonard Scheele, wife of the surgeon general, United States Public Health Service and Mrs. William Dyer, wife of Captain Dyer, USN.

and honesty, or call it integrity, in dealing with persons one fears, and by indirection you confess to a life habit of defensive duplicity, or call it diplomatic deceit, in relation to your mother, a callow form of behavior into which she bullied your father also, it seems.

Inasmuch as she is a woman who compulsively exerts such ignoble influence on intimates, she is not in the real sense a moral person; she isn't enlightened enough to be. And it seems to me this consideration confronts you with double measure of adult-age responsibility to "live by your own lights" during the forthcoming visit, rather than relapse into shivering hypocritical pseudo-submission to her outworn autocracy.

She will see fit to worry herself sick about the way you live, only if her intuition tells her that she can worry you sick also, by such "emoting." But if on the contrary she feels in her bones that you can no longer be reached and beaten by this old form of tyranny, she will settle peaceably for what she finds. Before she arrives, study Dr. Edward A. Strecker's book, "Their Mothers' Sons," to get a line on what makes her tick, and how to take the emanations thereof in stride.

Exercise Needed

Keeping Busy Not Enough To Keep Thin

By Ida Jean Kain

A busy working girl, "on the go" from morning till night, may be surprised and disgruntled at any tendency toward hip spreading . . . especially if she keeps a weather eye on calories.

One office worker was so on the defensive about the injustice of it all that I asked her to outline a typical day's activity—just what did she mean by "on the go?"

Well, her day was impressively busy, but reduced to actual exercise the score was low. Every morning she walks almost 2 blocks from her apartment to the bus, and across the street from the bus to the office. She rides the elevator to the third floor and sits at her desk until noon, with only an occasional foray into nearby offices. At noon she makes the trip, by elevator, to and from the building cafeteria . . . and back to her desk until 5 p. m. True, she earns her bread and butter, but she isn't "on the go" as far as her hips are concerned. And after work she naturally feels the need of a change, so she goes to the movies, and rides home. And so to bed. Repeat performance next day. Bridge game the following night, light refreshments.

Small wonder her hips spread! There is a lot of fleshy muscle on the backs of the hips and any muscle tends to take on fat easily when the circulation gets sluggish. But evidence to the contrary, the sitting isn't to blame for the spread—it's lack of any toning exercise. You can take your choice: sports, swimming, calisthenics—or hips.

Just a dash of exercise will keep muscles in tone, provided you go about it right. Try these streamliners.

Position: Lying face downward, head pillowed on folded arms, legs straight down.

Movement: Without rolling to other side and without bending knee, raise one leg up from the hip and hold, lower. Repeat six times, then with other leg. Do not arch small of back.

Position: Lying on left side on floor, head pillowed on folded arm, legs straight down, one on top of the other.

Movement: Bend right knee toward chest, then shoot leg straight down, forcibly, about 12 counts. Relax, change sides, and repeat. It's not as easy as rolling off a log, but it's exact and very slimming.

This doesn't sound like fun to you? Then skip it . . . and go swimming three times a week.

About Material For Rug Cracheting

Do you know where I might obtain some "sock tops" by the pound, to be looped together for crocheting rugs? These were obtainable before the war in packaged dye lots, but I have not seen any recently. M. M. A.

The art needlework departments of several local department stores carry knitted strips or jersey loops for making rugs.

What type of evening dress should be worn for an end-of-September formal? Would a summer formal be acceptable? R. M.

If the weather remains warm, a summer type evening dress would be appropriate. As a matter of fact, a representative of the formal gown department of a large Washington department store tells me that they sell more white, marquisette, strapless evening gowns for wear around Christmas time than at any other season of the year. So, it seems that the fluffy, summery type of gown can be worn here most of the year.

Can you tell me where I may obtain some ice tea spoons in a sterling pattern called "Mothers?". I believe it is made by the Whiting Silver Co., but I am not sure. The pattern is discontinued, I am told. S. D. C.

According to the sterling silver department of a Washington jewelry store, the "Mothers" silver pattern was discontinued for a time. However, recently another firm (the firm originally making the pattern is no longer in business and the pattern was transferred to another company) has sent out notice that it can be ordered for delivery after August, 1949. For further information about it, call the store at District 0916.

I would appreciate a recipe for Vichysoisse. M. B. C.

1 stalk celery
4 large potatoes
4 onions
1 cup water
1½ cups stock
½ teaspoon salt
Few grains cayenne
1 cup light cream
2 tablespoons chopped chives

Slice fine, leeks, celery, potatoes and onions. Add water, stock, salt and cayenne. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly until it comes to a boil; cook until vegetables are tender. Force through a sieve. Chill thoroughly. Add cream and blend. Garnish with chives and serve in bowls surrounded by crushed ice. Approximate yield: 6 portions.

Would you please tell me where I can purchase a second-hand shadow box frame? I wish to pad it with velvet and attach several antique spoons to it. I would like advice on a method for attaching the spoons to the velvet, also. B. L. B.

Since items of this sort are usually made to specification, I was unable to find a place where they can be purchased second hand. However, there is a firm on K st. which does just this sort of display. To discuss this further with them, call Executive 1080.

Attention M. F.: A firm that should be able to help you can be contacted by telephoning Shepherd 2330.

Could you tell me if it would be possible to dye a tropical worsted wool, gray uniform a Navy khaki color? If so, where could I have this done? R. W.

I would suggest you take the suit to a reliable firm which does dyeing and ask their judgment as to how satisfactorily it will dye. After seeing the suit, they will be in position to advise you. For such a firm look under "Cleaners and Dyers" in the yellow pages of the telephone book.

A towel rack with heavy china supports, glued to the tile with cement above the end of the bathtub, recently fell when it was accidentally struck sharply. The china support fell on the bathtub, breaking off a large section of the enamel. How can this best and most inconspicuously be repaired? Is there any firm which does this work in a professional manner which would surpass "home remedies"? J. E. W.

There is a firm which specializes in patching porcelain of all kinds. It can be reached by calling District 6923.

4 Policemen Are Added to County Force

Four policemen were added to the Prince Georges County police force yesterday.

The new men were sworn by W. Waverly Webb, clerk of the Prince Georges County Circuit Court, and began an intensive two-day training course under supervision of Detective Lieut. Charles N. Thomsen and Lieut. R. C. Sines, commanding the Hyattsville substation. Most of yesterday was passed on the pistol range.

David F. Dudley, 22, of Laurel, Md., former Navy shore patrolman, will be assigned to the Hyattsville substation, and the remaining three will go to headquarters station at Upper Marlboro. They are George F. Roland, 21, of 7591 Livingston rd., near Oxon Hill, also a former Navy shore patrolman; Donald D. Forsht, 21, of 300 Ave. C, District Heights, also a Navy veteran, and William J. Turner, 27, of Brandywine.

Pvts. J. P. Kearns and Joseph Vincent, now stationed at Upper Marlboro, will be transferred Friday to Hyattsville.

Wave Duty Sought by Many Here

The Navy recruiting station here resounded to the tap of feminine heels yesterday as would-be Waves applied for active duty.

As the Navy opened Wave ranks to new recruits and wartime veterans alike, at least 25 Greater Washington women filed for regular Navy duty at the 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. station.

Lieut. Gertrude M. Mountain, Wave recruiting officer, said that processing of the applications would begin immediately. Women to fill the first quota of six recruits "will be chosen in a week or so," she said.

If they pass their physical exams, slated for September 30, they will be sworn in and shipped to the Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill., for a class beginning October 5, she said.

Most of the women who applied yesterday have no previous military experience. But several veterans of Wave duty in World War II also applied.

Two of the Wave veterans, Misses Violet Jane Groves, of Hyattsville, and Nannie Belle Riley, Waynesboro, Va., were sworn in. Two more will be sworn in Friday.

Present quotas here call for 92 enlistments of wartime Waves through June 30, 1949, plus six women with no previous service for each monthly "boot" class at Great Lakes.

Enlistments are open to women with a high school education between the ages of 20 and 31. United States citizenship is required.

Reporter Learns About Eating (His Words)

So you'd like to be a columnist, eh?

Well, it's okay with me—but you'd better be sure you triple-check everything you print. Because if you don't, you'll find yourself in situations like this:

On Wednesday you walk past the Ewarts Restaurant sign, just as you have a thousand times before. But this time you notice that after all six letters light up and then black out, only alternate letters light up the next time, spelling out E-A-T.

This, you think, is pretty cute. So on Thursday you write three lines about it.

Friday you get letters from Oscar Kanngiesser of 2523 N. McKinley st., Arlington, Va.; Bruce Hollihan of 100 19th st. se., and Mrs. Robert M. Balkam of 6822 Standish dr., Radiant Valley, Hyattsville, Md. They all tell you the same thing:

"Take another look at the sign. There are three cycles, not two. They spell out a sentence, using varying combinations of the same letters: EAT AT EWARTS."

"Oh, fine, fine," you tell yourself. "Not only am I a dope for missing the point in the first place, but now I'll have to give Ewarts a lot of free publicity to correct it, and every other restaurant in town will want to poison me."

That's Friday. Saturday you hear from William Plampin of 4108 Tunlaw ter. nw. and Janet Shepherd of 3716 Military rd. nw. Just to make life more complicated for you, Janet thinks that it should also be noted that Ewarts has wonderful spoonbread.

At this point you're ready to enlist in the Foreign Legion.

Monday begins with a letter from Kent Yoke of 1314 N. Courthouse rd., Arlington, Va. Same message. Tuesday Mrs. H. L. Hemmerdinger of 4105 Wisconsin ave. nw. comes through with another correction. (Her letter is late because she's vacationing in Atlantic City—but don't think you're going to get away with anything just because the readers are on vacation. You've been kidding other people who make mistakes; now it's your turn to take the ribbing.)

Tuesday night Max Bassin stops you on the street and says, "Look, I know I'm a competitor and all that, but has anybody told you yet that the Ewarts sign has three cycles and . . ." Somehow you live through it.

Wednesday the mailman brings in a postcard from Milli Myers of 5447 42d st. nw. and says, "They're starting to thin out now. It's time to write an item acknowledging them."

So you do. And then you write another item, which starts out:

"So you'd like to be a columnist, eh? Well, it's okay with me—but you'd better be sure you triple-check everything you print."

VACATION

I plug away at my career,
To earn the wherewithal to pay
The piper for one month of play.

One-twelfth is such a little bit
I want to make the most of it.
And so I travel with such zest
I have to come back home to rest.

PARDON, SIR, BUT YOUR SIZE SLIP IS SHOWING

A distinguished gentleman walked into the Martin Manning Co. at 903 New York ave. nw. last week to arrange for the rental of a tuxedo.

"Mine's at home," he explained, "and I'm here to make a speech at the meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. The President is going to be there." The suit was provided, and the scientist went his way.

When he returned the tux yesterday a clerk noticed that the size ticket was still on the sleeve.

"Golly," he apologized, "we're supposed to remove those tickets before we let a suit go out. But . . . didn't you notice that . . . I mean, is that the way you . . .?"

"Yes," sighed the scientist, "that's the way I wore it in the presence of the President, and nobody called it to my attention. I guess I'm the original absent-minded professor."

It could have happened to anybody, of course. So it raises this question: Should the people who noticed the ticket have called it to the scientist's attention?

Do you embarrass the poor guy by telling him? Do you embarrass him more by letting him continue to make a spectacle of himself? Did Bobby Burns tell the lady on whom the louse was crawling?

I don't know; but things like this worry me.

NEW YORK—Winston Churchill is accepting the invitation of the National Association of Manufacturers to come to New York and address the association's dinner at the Waldorf in December . . . Eric LaGuardia, son of the late Mayor of New York, is enrolled at Washington and Jefferson College . . . Jimmy Hines, the former Tammany leader whose conviction in the policy-cases made Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey a national figure, attended the wake for Tammany's former Representative Jim Fay. Hines arrived in his car bearing license plate 1 JH, and was told: "This is like old times." He replied: "Yes, and didn't I again help make the next President of the United States?"

Former Gov. Charles Poletti of New York, off with his family for a year's stay in Geneva, probably will retire from his law partnership with Milton Diamond and Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr.

Herbert Hoover will not participate in the Presidential campaign. Hoover is devoting all his time to his Government Reorganization Plan, and wants to keep clear of any partisan politics so that the report will be accepted as a nonpolitical document. He will release it in five installments . . . When Bob Cooke of the Herald Tribune saw Rex Barney's no-hit game against the Giants, he said: "This is the first no-hitter I've seen since the Louis-Conn fight."

Cleveland Amory somehow neglected to include this story in his "Proper Bostonians'; Harold Jefferson Coolidge of The Boston Coolidges, was walking near his home on Beacon Hill one night and found the young son of a friend of his, drunk and loudly singing a bawdy song. Coolidge stared at the young man, and then indicated the proper order of the deities. "Do you realize, young man," he began, "that you are insulting the Lord?" The youngster continued singing . . . "Do you realize, young man," Coolidge continued, "that you're insulting the United States of America?" The young man continued singing . . . "Do you realize," was Coolidge's third and final thrust, "that your father is a member of the Somerset Club?"

Aldous Huxley's next novel will have Siena as a background. Huxley now is spending his time in the Italian medieval town, writing . . . Laraine Day, sitting in Toots Shor's with Leo Durocher after the Giants' victory over the Dodgers, sighed: "I never dreamed that the time would come when my social engagements would depend on the outcome of a ball game. If the Giants lose, I cancel all dates and Leo and I go home to cut our throats."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Baron Seized Plotting Uprising

By Drew Pearson

An insignificant news item appeared in the press recently to the effect that Baron Heinrich Von Einsiedel, great-grandson of Bismarck, had been arrested in the western zone of Germany. Behind that news item is a story that goes to the root of our trouble in Germany. Actually United States and British intelligence had been trying to catch Baron Von Einsiedel for months. For this descendant of Germany's great hero has become one of Russia's most effective Communist agents.

Von Einsiedel

The story has never been fully told, but Von Einsiedel, captured at Stalingrad, is considered the real genius behind the "Free Germany Committee" which the Russians organized from the surrendering Nazi army at Stalingrad. Field Marshal Von Paulus and General Von Seidlitz were the front men for this German army which collaborated with Russia, but the grandson of Bismarck was the backstage braintruster.

Since then he has played hand-in-glove with the Communists. A Nazi aviator during the war, awarded the Iron Cross, both first and second class, his prestige in Germany is great.

When caught in the western zone of Germany he was actually organizing Germans for "Freiheit Tag"—"Liberation Day"—in an effort to get the western zone of Germany synchronized for an uprising against the British and Americans. Significantly, he was sent into the western zone just as the Moscow talks began, which indicates what the Russians really thought of the Moscow conversations.

Note—Von Einsiedel was sentenced to six months in jail for carrying fake papers. Wonder what the United States officials will do with him when the six months are over—let him go back to Russia?

Rebuilding Germany

It hasn't leaked out, but Ambassador Averell Harriman has been cracking the whip over the 16 Mashall Plan nations to make them cut aid to western Europe in favor of increased aid to Germany.

At first the 16 Marshall Plan nations refused to make this cut in their own reconstruction plans. They told Harriman the USA was setting the stage for the next world war by betting its money on the untrustworthy Germans, who are likely to make another deal with Moscow—after we rebuild them.

However, Harriman had no choice in the matter. ECA boss Paul Hoffman, who in turn takes his cues from Secretary of Defense Forrestal and the banking group that wants to rebuild Germany, ordered otherwise. So Harriman flew to Brussels, Paris, London, whipcracked enough governments into line to put across the Hoffman-Forrestal plan for a reconstructed Germany.

Merry-Go-Round

When President Truman visits Dexter, Iowa, this week his official escort will be a mounted drill team of teen-aged youngsters who have organized "The Flying Hoofs." The youngsters own their own horses, have rehearsed a special drill for Truman called "The Presidential" . . . With the civilian population hungry, the American airlift is now flying champagne into beleagured Berlin—for the French. American flyers say they can't help it since 25 tons daily is allotted to the French and they can import anything they want . . . GOP political leaders in Washington state who don't love teamsters' boss Dave Beck say that Governors Dewey and Warren will have to decide pretty soon whether they are going to stick with Beck or with Republican former Gov. Arthur Langlie. Beck and Langlie have fought like cats and dogs . . . Myer Dorfman of St. Paul is slated to be next president of the Jewish War Veterans.

Truman Meets Sons of Italy

President Truman showed plenty of ire against Tom Dewey when he discussed Italian colonies with a delegation of American Sons of Italy the other day. Angrily, he accused his Republican foe of "playing politics" to win Italian-American votes.

"I'm leaving Italian colonies in the hands of the State Department," he told his Italo-American callers. "I'm not going to be influenced by Tom Dewey, who is trying to make a political football of the issue."

The President did not know that one of his callers, Francesco Palleria, president of the New Jersey Sons of Italy, was a Dewey elector. And from the way he talked it wouldn't have made any difference if he had. The New Jersey Republican grinned but said nothing.

"I think you know where my feelings and the feelings of most Americans lie," Truman said. "We are doing everything we can to help Italy and have spent over two billion dollars a year on Italian aid in the last few years. That should provide a pretty good clew as to where we stand on the matter of those African colonies."

Too much is better

I have so many things to do . . . I never get them done . . . But keeping always busy is . . . The way I have my fun . . . Because if I were idle I . . . Would feel depressed and blue . . . For want of mental exercise . . . And something more to do . . . I would not be content if all . . . My work were put away . . . And every morning merely meant . . . Another lazy day . . . And that is why I truly like . . . The tasks in front of me . . . Regardless of how difficult . . . Or many they may be . . . And I would rather have too much . . . Than not enough to do . . . Because each project peps me up . . . When I have seen it through.
